BOSTON GIRL DISAPPEARS

POSTPONE BOUTS IN ARMORY

The boxing bouts of Company E, Eighth Regiment, at the Cambridge Armory tonight were called off today.

Later it was announced that they would be held next Monday night.

These are the bouts to which women were to be admitted, but from which they were finally barred. Protest has been made by the Cambridge Law Enforcement League against these or any other bouts being held in Cambridge.

There is some mystery about the matter. This morning Commissioner of Public Safety Henry J. Cunningham was notified by Captain William J. Greene of Company E that the bouts would not be held because the regimental commander, Colonel Frank A. Graves of Marblehead, had revoked the permit.

The company had sold $1,500 worth of tickets and gone to about $450 in preliminary expense. There was an all-night powwow of officers. Sergeant William A. McDade and William Avery hurried to Marblehead, arriving at 1 o'clock this morning at Colonel Graves' house. They argued and pleaded two hours.

There was more pow-wowing among the officers when the sergeants returned. Meanwhile Captain Greene had told Commissioner Cunningham the event was off. Lieutenant J. H. McDade announced that the bouts had been postponed to Monday.

"But how about the colonel's permit?" McDade was asked.

"The bouts will be held Monday," he repeated and that was all he would say.

Commissioner Cunningham, who was just returned from a health trip south, said he would look into the matter.

The Rev. William S. Macnair, pastor of the Prospect Street Congregation Church and president of the Law Enforcement League, has asked President Lowell of Harvard to join in an official protest to the commissioner. He is awaiting a reply.

Meanwhile the Riverside Boat Club will pull off an amateur tournament tonight.

Fined $20 for Cruelty to Horse

Levi Fishman, No. 8 Balfour street; Joseph Gorelsky, No. 39 Paysten street; Israel Crossman, No. 24 Glenway street; Meyer Whittenberg, No. 14 Intervale street, all of Dorchester and Roxbury, were in Roxbury court today before Judge Hayden on complaint of David Bolton and Harry Allen, agents for the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, charged with overworking and cruelty to their horses. Crossman was fined $20 and the other cases filed.

2,000 Hotel Guests Flee St. Augustine Waterfront Fire

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., April 2.—Damage estimated at from $500,000 to $1,000,000 was caused when five hotels and thirty other buildings were destroyed and 2,000 guests and residents fled in panic today from a fire that swept the bay front section of the city.

Some of the guests of the hotel are unaccounted for, but it is believed that no lives were lost. Martial law has been declared and no one is allowed to pass within the fire zone.

The building in which the fire broke out was the Florida House.

The Clairmont and Magnolia Hotels, both of which were filled with tourists, were caught in the path of the flames and consumed.

The utmost excitement prevailed among the 2,000 guests as the fire, fanned to fury by the winds, licked its way through the group of ornate frame hotel buildings on the bay front. As practically all of the structures were of wooden construction, they offered fine fuel for the flames.

There were many fine Winter homes in the vicinity, and firemen and troops were pressed into service as fire fighters to save them from destruction.

A woman leaped from the third floor of the Florida House and was removed to the hospital with a broken back. The famous Vedder house was destroyed, and with it the priceless collection of the St. Augustine Historical Society.

Fog Stops Verrier in 800-Mile Flight

LONDON, April 2.—Aviator Verrier left the Suburban Aeronome at Hendon on an 800-mile flight to Monaco. Early today was obliged to abandon his trip near the channel coast on account of fog.

The present contest is known as the "aerial rally of Monaco" and is international in its scope. It was organized by the Monaco Sporting Club which gave a number of big prizes. The winner's share is $5,000.

Seven courses were laid out, all converging upon Monaco. The other aviators start from Paris, Vienna, Brussels, Badrid, Milan and Gothia, the routes being arranged in a roundabout way so that each almost must cover 800 miles.

Continue Case of Williams Girl

Eighteen-year-old Alice M. Williams pleaded not guilty in Chelsea District Court today to the charge of being a stubborn child, as alleged by her mother, Mrs. Frank J. Williams of No. 89 Congress avenue, Chelsea.

On account of the latter's prostration the case was continued to Friday, April 10. Alice left home last Thursday and was arrested in New York. Generoso Pianco, a Boston vaudeville actor, was arrested at the same time.

Coxey Opens New York Headquarters

NEW YORK, April 2.—Jacob S. Coxey, leader of the famous army which bore his name, marched on Washington in 1894, today established headquarters here. He said he would spend several days looking after plans for the mobilization of the New York wing of an army of 500,000 men which he intends to lead into the national capital some time this month.

INNOCENT, BUT DENIED FREEDOM

William O'Brien, the Westfield youth pardoned by the Governor's Council, is to be held a prisoner at the Concord Reformatory until April 27 in the face of the Council's pardon and the fact that the State Parole Board has declared him absolutely innocent.

For some unknown reason the Council is determined to keep the youth, though declared guiltless of the crime for which he was imprisoned, at Concord for more than three weeks.

This amazing attitude of the Council—that of apparently making an innocent man suffer for a crime he did not commit—aroused a stir of comment on Beacon Hill today. Everybody asked:

Why should O'Brien be kept a prisoner despite his innocence?

The Council made no explanation. It simply granted O'Brien a pardon, setting April 27 as the date of his release.

The pardon came after a statement had been read to the Council's pardon committee from Jacob Ditzner, another Westfield youth, who was convicted with O'Brien in connection with a robbery in that town last October.

In his statement, Ditzner not only exonerated O'Brien of the crime, but accused the police of telling him (Ditzner) to perjure himself by implicating O'Brien.

"I testified at the trial that O'Brien was my confederate in the robbery because the police told me to do so," wrote Ditzner. "I was arrested and the chief of police told me that if I was through O'Brien that I had been apprehended.

"I found later it was not through O'Brien, but the police told me to say in court that O'Brien was with me."

On the strength of Ditzner's statement, the pardon committee recommended O'Brien's freedom. Later the Council granted the pardon—but made it effective April 27.

Chief of Police William A. Flouton of Westfield today emphatically denied Ditzner's charge against the police. He declared that no pressure whatever had been brought by the police to bear on Ditzner. He said that Ditzner's confession implicating O'Brien was made of Ditzner's own free will.

"Both were arrested for the robbery of Mrs. Samuel Rosoff last October," said the chief. "Ditzner was the first one arrested. He confessed in my presence and that of Police Captain Michael F. Sullivan.

"Ditzner was told by us that he might tell all about the case or not, just as he chose. We made no promises, and brought no pressure to bear on him.

"Ditzner told us O'Brien had dared him to rob the woman. He said he (Ditzner) took the dare and that while O'Brien stood guard outside the woman's store, he entered, held her up with a revolver and robbed the till.

"Ditzner said he and O'Brien divided their spoils at a pool room.

CURLEY AXE ON SCHOOLS

Mayor Curley requested the School Committee today to lop off $2,000 off the salary of the superintendent of schools, Franklin B. Dyer, who now draws $10,000 a year, and also to reduce the number of assistant superintendents, of whom there are now six, each receiving $5,500.

This request, with a number of other changes in the management of the school department, were made at the luncheon at the Parker House to the members of the School Committee.

The Mayor thinks that it will be able to cut the estimate of the School Committee by $147,000 without impairing the efficiency of the schools. He asked the committee to reduce the number of years in the high school grades to three instead of four, and to increase the common school grades from eight to nine. This change he suggested because the average cost per year a pupil in the high grades is $52. The grammar school grades cost about $40 per pupil the year.

The Mayor also asked the School Committee permit the transfer of nurses, janitors and such such help from other departments instead of drawing them directly from the civil service lists. This will give him an opportunity to place men, especially from the health department.

"The salary paid to the Superintendent of School," Mayor Curley explained," is equal that of the Mayor of the city, and more than that of the Governor of the Commonwealth. Then the six assistants he has are just about as if the Mayor had six assistan mayors. I think that some saving may be accomplished by reducing the number. Then consider that 70 per cent. of the children who graduate from grammar schools go right out into life. It seems that an extra year for them will better equip them in their life's work.

Many survivors and the dead sailors were brought in today by the steamer Newfoundland.

The survivors tell a story of the sealer being crushed in an ice jam. When she went down the crew escaped to the ice floes, where they remained forty-eight hours.

Not all the men were taken off, and other vessels have gone in search of them.

LAURA B. HARLOWE, Dorchester girl who has been missing since Tuesday and for whom the police are now searching the Neponset River marshes.

Laura told me she was tired of life. I'm afraid she has drowned herself in the Neponset."—Annie Harlowe's comment on her sister's disappearance.

SEARCH MARSHES FOR GIRL

Laura B. Harlowe, a beautiful Dorchester girl, who was last seen when on Tuesday evening she rode on a street car from Dorchester toward Neponset, has been reported missing to the police, and under Captain Crowley of the Dorchester station a squad today planned to search the marsh and woodland along the Neponset River.

Herbert Cook, at whose home the girl boarded, said today that she and the man with whom she was "keeping company" had quarreled not long ago, but that they were reconciled last Sunday. "I asked her one day," he explained, "how she and John were getting along. She burst into tears. That was answer enough for me."

Miss Harlowe was twenty-five years old and a Nova Scotian, who came here some years ago. She boarded with Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Cook at No. 72 Southern avenue, Dorchester. A sister, Annie Harlowe, lives on Algonquin street, and a brother lives in Everett.

Miss Harlowe was employed in a store at Dorchester avenue and Wrentham street. Tuesday morning last she went to work as usual. All that day she seemed her natural self. In mid-afternoon she told a girl employe that she was going to Neponset that evening to see her sailhee.

She left the store at ten minutes past 7 in the evening. Mr. Cook said:

"I had a talk with John—I guess I'd better not tell his name or address. It wouldn't be fair to him. John seemed pretty blue. He said they had had no quarrel or misunderstanding.

"I believe there was a quarrel a while ago, though. I asked Laura the other day how she and John were getting along and she burst into tears.

"But last Sunday he came to see her here, and they seemed as good friends as ever.

"She was a quiet girl, stayed at home most of the time, and never went anywhere except with John."

Miss Harlowe's sister, Annie, believes the girl has killed herself. She said:

"My sister had said she was sick and disgusted with life for some time. She said things were not going right, and once she told me: 'You will find me at the bottom of the river some day.'

"I believe she went to Neponset that night to drown herself; and that she will be found at the bottom of the Neponset."

BIG UPSET COMING IN BRITISH GOVERNMENT: WHAT OF THE KING?

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, April 2.—Complete reorganization of the British government is in sight. As the political storms arising from the army resignation crisis and the Ulster situation slowly clear away interest in Sir Edward Grey's proposal for a federal form of government increases.

Prominent members of the Liberal, Unionist, Irish Nationalist and Labor parties are discussing the project in conferences, and when Parliament convened today for resumption of debate on the home rule bill the interest was at fever height.

If the project is seriously taken up and Parliament decides to form a government after the system of that of the United States, a commission will probably be sent to America to study the government institutions there. But even if the federal idea does take root it will be at least six years before it is put into operation.

WHAT ABOUT THE KING?

The most interesting inquiry arising from the proposition of governmental reorganization is: What would become of King George? Under the limited monarchy with its flexible constitution there is a niche in the government for the king. Under a federal system, with a written constitution, it is difficult to see where the King could be placed.

It is significant as showing the easing of the situation that King George and Queen Mary have made plans to go to Windsor for the week-end.

Sir Edward Carson is scheduled to speak in Parliament on Monday just before a division is taken on the second reading of the home rule bill, and will give the views of the Ulster Orangemen on the federal government idea.

Although many British Unionists have spoken in favor of it, the attitude of the Unionists in Ulster has not been set forth clearly.

The hand of Premier Asquith, who has now assumed the duties of Secretary of State for War, is seen in the activity among court attaches, who are accused of meddling in affairs of state. Two equerries have resigned and a number of others have been summoned to Buckingham Palace for interrogation next week. All equerries are recruited from the ranks of the army and navy and are very in political sentiment.

General Sir Charles Douglas having been appointed chief of the general staff and first military member of the army council, it now remains for the new war secretary to pick a successor to Adjutant-General Sir J. S. Ewart, who resigns as second military member of the army council.

JUSTICE TO IRELAND COMING OUT IN GREAT HOME RULE DEBATE

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

In the quick succession of stirring incidents which in these days are marking the progress of debate in the House of Commons, many noteworthy passages are almost escaping comment in their necessarily brief and hurried treatment by the daily press.

One incident of last evening in the House of Commons stands out among the most remarkable of them all. It consists of half a dozen lines in the speech on home rule by Sir Stanley Buckmaster, the new Solicitor-General of England.

Mr. Gladstone gave expression to the strongest language in denouncing the Act of Union which was forced by England upon Ireland 113 years ago.

Such Englishmen as Viscount Morley and James Bryce have likewise put different persons in this long fight for home rule, given voice in burning words of indignation to their rejection of the infamous system of coercion government by which Ireland was ruled by the Tory ring at Dublin Castle.

But never before was the picture drawn so well and so truly as it was done last night by the English Solicitor General, the second officer of the law in the service of the Crown. Our cable says:

The Solicitor General drew a picture of Irish Crown prosecution in the old days, "When the crooked court contained a packed jury, a spy on the witness stand, a desperate, fanatical peasant in the dock and a judge who did not inspire the confidences of the people.

"Redmond," cried the Solicitor General, "has lifted home rule to the broad highway of Constitutional demand."

What a revival those words were of such "terrible ruffians"—as they were well called by a historian, as Lord Norbury, who sentenced Robert Emmet; of the unspeakable Judge Keogh, of Judge Lawson, the "hanging judge" of coercion days in the eighties.

Truth has been a long time coming into its own in Irish history. It is having its innings now in the British House of Commons.

French Steamship Sunk by Collision in Fog; Crew Saved

DOVER, England, April 2.—The French steamer Maine and the Spanish steamship Jose de Arambura collided in a thick fog off the Goodwin sands today. Boats from the Maine were found floating off this port, which led to the belief that the French vessel had been sunk. The crew of the Maine was rescued.

NORFOLK, Va., April 2.—The steamer Robert M. Thompson and schooner Augustus W. Snow were in collision early today in a dense fog off the coast. The captain of the steamer, which was bound from New Orleans to Philadelphia, reported by wireless that the schooner's bow was stove in and that she was leaking badly.

Hastings Smythe, a senior.

Budget Deadlock in French Chamber

PARIS, April 2.—For the first time in the history of the Third Republic, the Chamber of Deputies will retire before the budget becomes law. The Chamber, by a vote of 400 to 70, last night, joined to the budget the measure imposing a tax on rentes, incomes and capital. The Senate has already rejected this measure and will consider the budget separately.

BOSTON WOMAN SLAYER, DYING, HIDES NAME

The slayer of Mrs. Mary A. Chick, the young man who first shot her and then himself, revived at the Worcester Hospital today, but steadfastly refused to tell his name or to explain why he shot the woman.

To all questions he returned a stony silence. He shot Mrs. Chick at her apartments at No. 51 Green street, Worcester. She is the wife of Louis V. Chick, who is in business on Portland street, Boston.

Mrs. Chick died without being able to speak. She was shot just below the heart. The man is fatally injured, with two bullets in his right side. He had removed from his clothing every evidence of his identity.

The police are utterly baffled by the case. They at first thought of robbery as a motive, but realized that a robber would hardly shoot himself after his theft.

PARTED FROM HUSBAND.

Friends of Mrs. Chick say the man who did the shooting was a stranger to her and to them and their statements have deepened the mystery. Her husband almost collapsed when told of the tragedy but was unable to furnish any information that would lead to a solution of the crime.

Mrs. Chick formerly lived with her husband in an apartment over his printing shop at No. 17 Portland street. They separated four years ago and since then she had made her home in Worcester and earned a living by renting rooms in her apartment at No. 51 Green street, that city.

NO CLEW FROM VICTIM.

Mrs. Ruth A. Shepard of No. 466 Columbus avenue and William Raymond, one of Mrs. Chick's lodgers, were in the apartment when the shooting took place. Although neither of them saw Mrs. Chick shot, their stories are the only clews in the possession of the police.

As far as the police were able to learn, Mrs. Chick was in the parlor talking to Raymond and Mrs. Shepard, who had gone up to Worcester to visit her, when the doorbell rang and she left them to answer it.

A short time later three shots echoed through the apartment and Mrs. Shepard and Raymond rushed out of the parlor and found Mrs. Chick lying on the floor with a bullet wound under her heart. A young man about twenty-two was stretched across the threshold of a hall bedroom. Near him was a revolver.

"I'm shot, I'm shot," moaned Mrs. Chick as Mrs. Shepard raised the wounded woman's head in her arms. Mrs. Chick then lapsed into unconsciousness. Raymond summoned the police. Dr. Richard Shannahan arrived a few minutes later, but Mrs. Chick was beyond medical aid.

Dr. Shannahan did his best to get her to tell the name of the slayer and the facts of the shooting. The dying woman partially revived, opened her lips as if to speak and dropped back into the physician's arms, dead.

LECTURE AND $20 FINE FOR LYNN 'MASHER'

John Moulson, a Lynn shoe worker, was fined $20 today in the Lynn court by Judge Lummus on a charge of attempting to flirt with pretty Miss Lena Barber of No. 40 Rockway street, Lynn. Moulson approached Miss Barber last evening on Liberty street and tried to flirt with her. She summoned Officer John Kennedy and had the man arrested. This is the second arrest and fine for the same offence within two days, and Judge Lummus says that he is going to put a stop to the alarming prevalence of mashers and public girls in the Shoe City.

In court today Judge Lummus asked Moulson if he read the newspapers. Moulson replied that he did not. "Well, if you did you would have seen that I fined a fellow $20 yesterday for the same thing that you are charged with. Had you looked at the newspapers you might have saved yourself $20 besides the humiliation of appearing in court on such a charge," remarked Judge Lummus.

Auto Mystery Stirs Atlantic City

ATLANTIC CITY, April 2.—The finding of a woman's torn and blood-stained clothing, a quantity of dark-brown hair and two side combs on the road between Egg Harbor and the city, have furnished the police a mystery which seems no nearer solution than when the articles were discovered last Sunday. One theory of the police is that the unknown woman was murdered in this city and then was taken in the automobile to the woods near where the clothing was found.

GRACE LA RUE SEEKS DIVORCE FROM CHANDLER

Grace La Rue, the actress, who spent her honeymoon with Byron Chandler, "the million dollar kid," at Auburndale, today seeks a divorce, declaring: "I am unhappy with him. There is nothing left to do but get a divorce."

She declares she intends to name other women in her suit.

Chandler came into the limelight when living at Reading, and won a reputation during trips to New York as "the best little spender on Broadway."

ROMANCE FOLLOWED DIVORCES.

His romance with Miss La Rue began after he had been divorced from his first wife, Miss Grace Stricker of New Jersey. Grace La Rue had not long before divorced her first husband, Charles Burke, a vaudeville comedian, with whom she played in "The Silver Moon."

The Chandlers have been in London until recently, where Miss La Rue preferred remaining on the stage enjoying in private life the millions her husband, as heir to a Manchester, N. H., banker, is said to have access to through an allowance from his mother.

Miss La Rue returned to New York a few days ago, and news of her intended divorce action has just become known. Chandler himself is said to be still in London where, on his first appearance, he bought an automobile coach and ran it to Brighton Beach and Windsor in opposition to Alfred G. Vanderbilt's venture.

SUED BY CHORUS GIRLS.

"I have not made up my mind just whom I will name in the suit," the actress said. "There are several women, but if I can make the proper arrangements with his mother, I shall not mention any of them, but bring my action on the general grounds."

Today the actress said that no matter what settlement was made, her suit would be brought.

Chandler is known well to theatrical folks on both sides of the water. He was sued by two chorus girls for breach of promise when he was barely nineteen years old.

Granite Polishing Mill at Lanesville Burns, Loss $150,000

The polishing mill of the Rockport Granite Company at Lanesville burned early today, with $150,000 loss. The origin of the fire was mysterious and an investigation was at once begun.

A big stock was in the building and the fire and water cracked fine marble to fragments. The building and contents were a total loss.

Lanesville fire authorities telephoned to Gloucester for help and the entire Gloucester department responded.

The flames lighted the whole Cape for miles.

SENATE CLEARS DECKS FOR FINAL STRUGGLE AGAINST CANAL FOES

By ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The Senate today is clearing that body's solemn, not to say severe, decks for free tolls canal action. Also, before all its senatorially over, unless all signs fail, Mr. Wilson will have, canal wise, the time of his White House life.

Mr. Wilson, in his pro-English program to close the canal against American coastwise ships will have a hard road to travel. Senator Ollie James, who is altogether pro-English, pro-Wilson, thinks otherwise, and stepping to the Senate forefront as a prophet, declared that Mr. Wilson would be given his English canal way by a Senate vote of two to one.

Mr. James should carry his powers of prophecy to the nearest blacksmith shop and have their rivets tightened. Not that anyone paid too much serious heed to the canal-English-Wilson prognostications or Mr. James. Had the thing been a horse race, folk would have heard him with more confidence.

NO COMPLIMENT TO WILSON.

Now that the dust of House battle has measurably subsided the railroad finger in the canal pie becomes more evident than ever. The queer thing is that no one dreams of charging Mr. Wilson with aught save motives of honest poplan marble white. They believe that he has been used, that the railroads, working through English influences, have made a cat's paw of that promoted pedagogue.

It is a view, truly, which pays no compliment to Mr. Wilson's deep-sea perspicacity, but at least it rescues him from any imputation of double dealing. It is remembered that just prior to Mr. Wilson's homeless canal message, J. J. Hill, the Northwestern Railroad king, was at the White House many times.

Also, the oft-mentioned Sir Lionel Carden, Premier Borden and Mr. Tyrrell (Sir Edward Grey's private secretary) in those days were Wilson visitors most eagerly received. In conjunction with these reflections you hear it whispered in every corner that, from Mr. Hill to Mr. Tyrrell the mission upon which these professional negotintors and alarm-breeders sought Mr. Wilson was an English mission.

There was the Tehuantepec Railroad, belonging to Sir Carden, all partner of Lord Cowdray, with its 700,000 yearly tons of freight at $4 a ton which a free canal would take from it. There was the Canadian-Pacific, dear to Premier Borden's heart, which would be more or less ham-strung were the canal thrown open to United States coastwise trade. These systems were English from bark to core. As for the vigorous Mr. Hill's Great Northern Railway, the stock and bonds are largely owned in England.

READY-MADE ENEMIES.

Certainly the English for the greater part back Mr. Hill's Great Northern Railway, just as the Honorable Jeff Levy, with a seat in the American Congress and voting most vehemently to close the canal, owns almost if not quite a million of stock in the Canadian-Pacific. The English are large owners of stock in every transcontinental railway—American, Canadian and Mexican.

The Hills and Tyrrells and Cardens and Bordens did not talk "railroad" to Mr. Wilson. Having advantage of his genius for alarm and the ready ease wherewith he can be made to see an armed ghost, they assured him that every nation on the world's front was the ready-made enemy of this country.

Japan hated us because she hadn't been permitted to buy and own the State of California in twenty-acre lots.

Russia hated us because our bankers loaned their gold to Japan to whoop her to pieces in the recent war.

Germany hated us for trade reasons, while France hated us for luck.

As for Mexico and every Central and South American State, to merely name the United States in their coffee-colored presence was to throw them into a fever.

Canada hated us for those Taftian attempts to ensnare her with a specious reciprocity.

England, although she could not quite bring her honest, kindly, motherly old heart really to hate us, she has been left hurt at our free tolls canal scheme for coastwise ships.

INNOCENT MR. WILSON.

The Hills and Cardens and Tyrrells and Bordens gathered their heads and at last we'd be forced to cross our troops into Mexico. Then would we need the help of England. Japan was already the ally of Mexico.

As the Americans crossed the Rio Grande the Japanese would swoop upon the Sandwich Islands and the Philippines. Russia, already growling over those Japanese loans, might thrust her bear's snout into the mess on the side of Mexico and Japan.

Every South and Central American State would rejoice. More, they would send supplies to our Japan-Mexican-Russian enemies. This country was surrounded by peril and pitfalls wide-mouthed as gehenna and to be without England's aid and kindly countenance was equivalent to being lost.

"But how to get it?" was the frightened, guileless, inexperienced query of Mr. Wilson, who, fresh from the innocent cross-rooms of Princeton, drank in the gruesome news like spring water.

Nothing more simple. England would stand by him, would save the United States for the little boon of a closed canal to coastwise ships. England would even remove the usurper, Huerta, from that stolen presidency of Mexico and put him back in his cage.

Thus frightened, thus promised, Mr. Wilson hurried before Congress with his pale-faced message.

That's the thus far true story of the canal free-tolls fight. Those visiting railroad sharps scared Mr. Wilson with their international ghost stories. Being scared he swayed the House to his fear-smitten will by waving a wand of potent patronage.

LONDONTIMES SUMS UP THECANAL FIGHT

LONDON, April 2.—The London Times Washington correspondent warns Britons that the repeal bill is not yet out of the woods. It has yet to run the gauntlet of the Senate committee, and before the Senate debate starts "Weeks of stormy, bitter debate, weeks of agitation are inevitable."

"English readers," it says, "must be warned against accepting as representative of public opinion the tone of journalistic champions of the British cause. On the other side are Mr. Hearst's powerful newspapers, the activities of coastwise shipping people, the desire of many to curb the railroads, the influence of Irish-Americans and other anglo-phobes and other domestic factors, to say nothing of the vague feeling among the masses, that Great Britain has after all no right to dictate with regard to the management of an American-owned, American-built canal. All these forces are mobilized to win the small number of votes necessary to turn the scale—a number variously estimated from two to eight Senators."

SENATORS TO DEMAND WILSON GIVE REASONS FOR TOLLS REPEAL

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Factional lines were closely drawn in the Senate today in preparation for the fight over repealing the free tolls clause of the Panama Canal act. The administration ultimatum from Senator Owen that only one week should be taken by the Committee on Interoceanic Canals, and that longer deliberation would result in the discharge of the committee from consideration of the measure, was accepted by opponents of repeal as a challenge.

Opponents of the measure asserted today that before a wheel turns in the repeal legislation they will attempt to force President Wilson to give his reasons for wishing to nullify the free tolls clause. This was taken as the threat of a long filibuster.

A strong minority of the Senate favors the Poindexter resolution calling upon the President for his reasons and by working together these foes of the administration could conduct a filibuster that would delay consideration of the actual measure for some time.

A poll of the Senate bears out claims that President Wilson has a majority to support his demand for repeal. This majority, however, includes several Senators who want to amend the Sims' bill so that the United States will not surrender its rights over coastwise trade passing through the canal. There is evidence of wavering in both lines, and polls of the Senate are expected to be more or less inaccurate until debate on the floor has progressed a considerable time.

Administration Senators are not sanguine over any proposed effort to discharge the interoceanic canals committee from consideration of the repeal bill in the event the committee is deliberate in its consideration of the measures. Such a motion, it is predicted, would tend to retard progress on the measure because the Senate as a matter of precedent seldom discharges a committee from consideration of a bill except after a bitter and protracted fight.

SENATOR PENROSE DOUBTS IF REPEAL PASSES THE SENATE

PHILADELPHIA, April 2.—United States Senator Penrose, in an interview today, expressed the opinion that the tolls exemption bill may be defeated in the Senate and that the measure will split the Democratic party.

The tolls exemption bill is the rock on which the Democratic party will split. I consider it doubtful that it will pass the Senate.

I have not made a thorough personal canvass of the Senators, but have spoken to some of the Western Democratic Senators, and they are against the President on this issue. The debate in the Senate cannot be limited as it was in the House. Senatorial debate is limited only by physical endurance.

I will vote against the measure and I fully expect that Senator Oliver will do likewise.

Senators Penrose and Oliver were two of the nine Senators who voted as the railroads and the British government desired when the Panama Canal act was passed in August 1912.

Set Aside Verdict Against Bailey Will

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., April 2—Supreme Court Justice Tompkins today set aside the verdict of the jury that revoked the will of Mrs. Ruth Louisa Bailey, who inherited the $5,000,000 estate of James A. Bailey, the circus proprietor. The contest to break the will was brought by Mrs. Anna Isabel Hutchinson, sister of Mrs. Bailey, who receives $10,000 a year for life under the will.

Bryan Asks Congress to Give Him Footman

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Secretary of State Bryan has asked the House Committee on Appropriations to supply him with a footman. He already has a coachman. The committee suggested to the "Commoner" that he might have an automobile, but the idea was spurned by Mr. Bryan, who said he is "entirely satisfied with a carriage."

'BEST DRESSED'; MRS. WHEELER HAS LONE TRUNK

Mrs. Claudia Carlstadt Wheeler, known as one of the best-dressed young society women in London and New York, is in Boston with one walking suit, one evening gown and one trunk.

This is a limited wardrobe for Mrs. Wheeler, as her friends know. She usually takes as much luggage as a prima donna and enough high-priced gowns to stock a shop.

But she is temporarily embarrassed just now owing to her litigation with her husband, Albert G. Wheeler, Jr., a New York broker, and her $1,000,000 suit against his father-in-law for alleged alienation of her husband's affections.

Mrs. Wheeler's jewels are with a London broker and most of her trunks and finery are held by the customs officials in New York. When she hastened across the Atlantic to learn why her $10,000 alimony had suddenly stopped she was short of ready funds and she hasn't had time since to attend to these trivial matters.

She has been too busy hunting her husband, from whom she was separated by the New York Courts two years ago, and locating and appraising his securities in different large cities in her attempt to win back full alimony, the figure having been reduced to $5,000 a year.

Her husband reported to the courts that he was under heavy financial obligations to his father, Albert G. Wheeler, Sr., the Chicago builder of railways. The Court told Mrs. Wheeler if she could find that her husband had more unencumbered property than he represented she could get $10,000 from him again.

She is on the trail with able attorneys. That is why she came to Boston. She has attached securities here.

Mrs. Wheeler is a Boston girl. She has six generations of cousins living in and around Boston. Her great, great grand-aunt is eighty-four. Mrs. Wheeler is a descendant of John Paul Jones. She is thirty-three. She left her husband because of his alleged attentions to another woman.

MRS. CLAUDIA WHEELER, in Boston with but two gowns, though her costumes have dazzled society.

Miss Curtis, who is twenty-one years old, is an attractive brunette. After alighting from a car near her home last evening at 11 o'clock Miss Curtis started to walk to her home a short distance away. She had come but a few feet when she was attacked by an unknown man who sprang upon her from the thick bushes along the roadside.

The woman screamed as her assailant threw her to the ground and the man was frightened away. After watching a house in the Italian quarter until late at night, a man answering to Miss Curtis' description came out and run into the arms of the waiting officer. He was identified by Miss Curtis.

Nixon requested a continuance of the case until April 10, which was granted.

Miss Blanche Rose, a well-known actress, who darkened her gray hair with a simple preparation which she mixed at home, in a recent interview at Chicago, Ill., made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray hair and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home: To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the required shade. This will make a gray haired person look 20 years younger. It is also fine to promote the growth of hair, relieves itching and scalp humors and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair."—Adv.

URGES BOSTON TO FIGHT HIGH LIGHTING RATE

The city of Philadelphia has passed through a successful struggle to make its gas companies obey the law, respecting their obligations to the public. It was a long, hard fight, but it is worth all it cost.

Now the people have turned their attention to the electric lighting company and are fighting to reduce the price of electric light. They have called attention to the lower rates in other American cities only to be met by the argument of the company that Boston, supposedly intelligent Boston, is paying more than Philadelphia. This has embarrassed Philadelphia in her struggles and interested the Quaker City in the demand of the Hub for a reduction of light charges.

Dr. M. L. Cooke, Chief of the Bureau of Public Works, who is directing the contest in Philadelphia, wired the Boston AMERICAN as follows:

Interested in not having Boston make ten-year contract at 87 or any like figure.

M. L. COOKE,
Director Public Works.

Intelligent citizens are amazed at Mayor Curley's approval of the important electric lighting contract in the short time he had to consider the matter. They point out that here was a chance for real economy, such economy as would not impair the efficiency of the city's working force, would not deprive the sick of accommodations at the public hospital, would not shut the splendid public gymnasiums, would not deprive the workingman of a vacation, such as is given to employes of large private corporations and the State.

FEDERALS BATTLE TO HOLD CITY

JUAREZ, April 2.—A rumor is current throughout the city that General Villa has been killed in the fighting at Torreon.

This was heightened by a long secret conference that General Carranza held with his army chiefs over the wire. No telegraph operator other than the provisional president was allowed in the telegraph office while the talk by wire was going on.

The excitement over the conference and the sensational rumors that resulted caused Carranza to issue an official statement. He stated that General Villa had reported that the Torreon Federals were putting up an unexpected defence and that fierce fighting was going on in the city and at Canyon Del Huarache, but that he expected to win a complete victory within a few hours.

According to Carranza, Villa said the Federals had strongly entrenched themselves at the canyon, but that the forces of Constitutionalists sent to the eastward under General Herrera had cut all railroad lines and thus prevented Federal reinforcements coming to the aid of Torreon.

Still another rumor was that Villa had found it impossible to take Torreon by storm and that he had appealed to Carranza for aid or permission to negotiate terms of surrender with General Velasco.

Carranza's brief outline of the conference failed to end the anxiety among his followers.

FEDERALS MAKING THEIR LAST STAND IN TORREON, IS REPORT

CHIHUAHUA, April 2. — Driven from the main fortifications of the city by the dashing attacks of General Villa's Constitutionalist troops, the shattered Federal army commanded by General Refugio Velasco is making its final stand in Torreon today.

Crippled by terrific losses and desertions the Federal commander has put up the bravest fight ever recorded in the history of Mexico, but advices received here this forenoon from General Velasco indicate that the end of the bloody conflict is near.

"VILLA'S POSITION IS GROWING UNTENABLE," WASHINGTON HEARS

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Torreon has not been captured by the rebels, nor is it in any danger of being taken. Federal reinforcements have reached the city, and General Villa's position is rapidly growing untenable.

This statement was given out at the Mexican embassy here today by Senor Algara, in charge of dafairs, after receiving several telegrams from the Mexican consul at El Paso.

Mexican Federals Win Naval Battle

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The Mexican Federal gunboat Guerrero defeated and totally disabled the Mexican rebel gunboat Tampico in an engagement off Topolobampo, according to a report received by the Navy Department today from Admiral Howard, commanding the American forces in the Pacific.

Find Smallpox on Spanish Pulp Boat

When port physicians went aboard the Spanish steamer "Ines," in from Barcelona with wood pulp, and lined up the crew for inspection, a doctor caught one man by the arm and cried:

"Here—you're sick."

The man admitted he hadn't felt very well for nineteen days. The doctor diagnosed his case as small pox. The sick man and three fellow mates were sent to Gallup's Island, the remainder of the crew vaccinated and confined to the ship, and the lines was thoroughly fumigated.

POSTURE FAD ROILS PATIENT L MOTORMEN

Boston motormen and conductors were a bit "fussed up" today over the news that the American Posture League—with two Boston physicians on its board—has been incorporated, at Albany, with the object of making people stand and sit properly—especially trolley workers.

The motormen and conductors are waiting for directions for proper attitudes in the following emergencies:

When the car "splits a switch."

When a rude teamster keeps his truck on the track ahead.

When a 200-pound passenger gets rough with the 110-pound conductor.

In a head-on collision.

When the car is so full the conductor has to hang on by his teeth in collecting fares.

In the baseball rush to Fenway Park.

And in similar times of quick action and short temper.

A poor-but-honest motorman said earnestly as he piloted a car up Washington street:

"He graceful, is it, while I run this car? I'd like fores to call that to President Bancroft. I ain't paid for bein' graceful. I'm paid to shoot this car through on time and not run over all the teams, autos, dogs, women and kids between the East Boston Ferry and Dudley street terminal. This is a trolley car I'm running, not a tango tea. Graceful, huh!"

The American Posture League, dispatches from Albany say, is working with the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company to induce more healthful attitudes by its motormen and conductors. They call the work "posture engineering."

Miss Jessie Bancroft, assistant director of physical training in New York schools, is president. Among the directors are Dr. E. G. Brackett and Dr. Joel E. Goldthwait of Boston.

HARPER'S BAZAR

Hundreds of little boys and childs in children's institutions in Boston—the crippled and the orphans, the sick and the well—will feel their little hearts thumping more joyously and their little faces brighten more sunnily today. Into the lives of the little unfortunates the "pickaninnies" band" and Miss Maude Parker, a Boston girl, will bring hours of real happiness, under the auspices of the Boston AMERICAN.

From institution to institution will go Miss Parker and the "pickaninnies" scattering rays of sunshine and enjoyment. Miss Parker is the leading lady in the big show at the Boston Theatre, "In Old Kentucky," and the band makes up another feature. At the special request of the AMERICAN, the management permitted the talented actress and the "pickaninnies" to make the tour of the children's homes in the city.

At 11 o'clock, in autos furnished by kind-hearted dealers, Miss Parker and the "pickaninnies" will go to the Children's Hospital out on Huntington avenue.

This will be the start for the day. Here the children that are ill abed and the children that are convalescing will be entertained for an hour in tip-top manner.

MUSIC AND DRAMATICS.

At noon the entertainers will go to the Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children on St. Botolph street. Here, while the kiddies eat their dinners during the noon hour's recess, they will be served with a dessert of music and dramatics.

At 3 o'clock the autos will carry Miss Parker and the band to the St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum on Camden street. Here there are more than 175 fatherless and motherless children. For an hour they will enjoy a clean, wholesome, thoroughly enjoyable entertainment. From there the entertainers will go to the Home for Jewish Children in Dorchester. Here the party will wind up a day devoted to the best of alms—adding to the happiness of unfortunate little ones.

Yesterday the entertainers spent an hour at the New England Home for Little Wanderers on West Newton street. The audience of eighty-five youngsters voted it a treat of a lifetime.

The program will consist of recitations by Miss Parker, selections by the "pickaninnies," with singing and buck and wing dancing and baton juggling. Some of the performers will be Robert Grundy, world's champion baton juggler, and Mose Burke, champion buck and wing dancer.

"OLD KENTUCKY" FEATURES.

The band is one of the winning features of "In Old Kentucky"—in which Miss Parker is the leading lady. A. W. Dingwall, owner of the company, has agreed to let his pickaninnies go the rounds, and automobile firms have volunteered their cars to transport the performers.

The AMERICAN set about arranging the treat for the children as soon as the pickaninnies arrived in town. The automobiles to be used for the tour include two White cars loaned by J. S. Hathaway of the White Company; one Chevrolet car from the Chevrolet Motor Company, loaned by Manager W. C. Sills; a Stutz car, loaned by Manager M. F. Chase of the Stutz Motor Car Company; and an Oakland, loaned by Manager W. B. Fewell of the Oakland Motor Car Company.

CHOIR SINGER IS NAMED IN SIEGEL SUIT

NEW YORK, April 2—Papers in the suit of Mrs. Henry Siegel for divorce from the indicted merchant are on file today at the office of the county clerk.

The summons and complaint in the divorce suit were served on Siegel at a local hotel, through arrangement with his counsel, Stanchfield and Levy. They cannot be examined by other than counsel in the case, under the rules of the Appellate Division. As soon as they were served, the papers were at once taken to the county clerk's office by Mrs. Siegel's counsel, Howe and Hallman.

Both refused to discuss the case further at this time.

Mrs. Siegel has said that she may later issue a supplementary statement.

Whether Siegel will fight his wife's suit for divorce is not known. He has refused to discuss the case, under advice of counsel.

Judge Hough is waging a firm fight for the depositors in the bankrupt Siegel banks. He seeks to get for the benefit of the depositors and other creditors every cent available. It is believed Mrs. Siegel's hint of concealed assets in her husband's name may be followed up.

Twelve new indictments against Siegel and his partner, Vogel, are predicted as likely when the United States Court sits next week. These indictments all deal with financial transactions.

Developments were awaited today following the announcement that Mrs. Siegel will sue for some of the money now in the hands of the creditors of her husband's bankrupt bank.

Ordered to Work After Ten-Year Rest

John F. McCormack was in Lynn court today for violating his probation. The probation officer said that in ten years John has worked only once—when he spent a month in jail for non-support—and that John's wife was obliged to toil in a shoe shop. John pleaded ill health, but Judge Lummus remanded him to the State Farm.

MEETING TO BOOM STATE'S DEVELOPMENT

A State-wide conference on city and town development will be held Saturday, when executives of almost every community in Massachusetts will meet in Ford Hall on invitation of Governor Walsh to discuss "Prosperity and How to Get It."

John H. Fahey, president of the Chambers of Commerce of the United States, will be chairman, and the "leader" of the sessions will be Dr. Benjamin McKie Rastall of the Municipal Service Bureau of New York.

James A. McKibbin, secretary of Boston Chamber of Commerce, has been in charge of arrangements for the Governor. Among the questions to be considered—as outlined by the Governor—are these:

"How can Massachusetts best compete with Western promotion offers?

"What is the most important thing a model commission can do to develop its community?

"The development of our small towns—how can it best be accomplished?

"But I want other questions," Governor Walsh said today. "A question box should be the big feature of the sessions. I want everybody to come to Ford Hall with the one question which he believes to be, above all others, the question looming largest before the advancement of his community industrially or commercially.

MYSTERY IN BIG BACK BAY GARAGE FIRE

Scores of men and women abandoned social affairs in the Back Bay and several guests at hotels in the vicinity braved the rain and mud early today to watch a spectacular fire which destroyed the garage of Kenneth A. Skinner, off Stuart street, Back Bay. The loss was estimated at $25,000. Several automobiles are reported to have been destroyed.

Three alarms were sounded for the fire, which threatened a row of garages and automobile repair shops in Stanhope street. More than 100 automobiles stored in garages in the danger zone were run into the street, but after an hour's battle the firemen had the flames under control.

Skinner's garage was a long one-story brick structure, standing by itself, and the firemen had access to all four sides.

The fire gained headway with great rapidity and within a few minutes flames were sweeping the oil soaked floor from one end of the structure to the other.

James Gilday, night watchman, discovered a blaze in the rear of the garage while making his rounds. He shouted to a chauffeur who was working on a car and both fled. Gilday sounded an alarm and when the firemen arrived Chief McDonough skipped the second and ordered a third alarm.

Flames bursting through the roof sent showers of sparks and blazing brands towards the garages in Stanhope street.

Tech Editor Starts 'Scrap' Over Union

The editor of "The Tech," the student daily paper at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has "started something," as the expression goes.

He wrote an editorial about "loafers" at Tech Union who disturb men who wish to study.

A hot reply was written that "the Union is not a place to study but a social centre."

The Tech editor published a retort that was not far from Colonel Roosevelt's famous "shorter and uglier" word.

The student body regards it as a first-class "scrap" and has hopes that somebody will get hurt.

CZAR'S DAUGHTER TO WED BALKAN HERO IN LOVE-AT-SIGHT MATCH

Grand Duchess Olga, whose marriage to Prince Charles, heir apparent of Roumanian throne, will enhance Russian power in the Balkans.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 2.—The betrothal of the young Grand Duchess Olga to Prince Charles of Roumania, son of Prince Ferdinand and heir apparent to the throne, was announced today.

Under the airy film of social rejoicing the betrothal forges a mighty link in the chain of Russian power.

The union of the tall and lovely Princess Olga—most beloved of all the Czar's daughters—to the future master of the Balkans has a significance that affects all Europe.

The announcement, although predicted when the royal family of Roumania arrived in St. Petersburg, was a surprise. It was thought the plans of the visit were but tentatively suggested. St. Petersburg society says it was not the consultations of potentates nor the correspondence of premiers that arranged the betrothal; it was an affair conducted by the prince of diplomats—Mr. Cupid.

Prince Charles, hero of wars that came so near to unifying Europe, met the beautiful Princess almost a week ago. They knew as well as anybody that their parents wanted them to marry each other. Naturally they hated the thought of it.

But just as naturally, according to those who have seen them always together during the visit, they fell in love.

The Princess had led a sheltered life, as all Russian princesses do. Little of the turmoil or the trouble and the world had come to her. She met a man inured to battle and schooled to matters of state. He found a woman, sweetly inexperienced, charming but cultivated in all arts, a musician of almost famous prowess and versed in many languages.

COLE DEFENDS ACTION ON NEW FIRE HOUSE SITE

Defending his indorsement of the new engine house site in Charlestown, which Mayor Curley charges has been sold to the city in the interest of a relative of ex-Mayor Fitzgerald, Fire Commissioner Cole today declared that in the interest of economy and efficiency the city should build on the new site and sell the old Winthrop street site. He points out that the new site is on a main thoroughfare and will increase in value as the years go by, while the old site on a side street will decrease.

Curley said: "It is the desire of Commissioner Grady and my sincere wish that in future fires be fought with water and apparatus and men rather than by conversation, theories and magazine articles.

"I guess that will hold Mr. Cole for a while."

ACCUSED YOUTH WAS PRAISED BY SLAIN TEACHER

AUBURN, N. Y., April 2.—Miss Lida L. Beecher, schoolmistress of Poland, N. Y., on March 3, to William H. George, founder of the George Junior Republic, in her efforts to help Jean Gianni, the youth who has confessed to slaying her, wrote as follows:

"I was very much impressed with the work done for and by the boys and girls of your republic when I was visiting with a group of Cortland Normal girls three years ago. Have you room for another citizen, a boy of fifteen years? He is a good-hearted boy, one of my pupils last year and one of my most interesting boys.

"I had a little talk with Jean tonight about the place, but have not yet asked his parents. Jean seemed to be quite interested when I explained as well as I could what was expected of him. Would you please send them circulars of your school, for I am pretty sure that Jean's father, who is well educated and wants to make something of his only son, would be delighted."

ICE CHEAPER IN BROOKLINE AND BRIGHTON

Ice is cheaper in Brookline and Brighton.

The new schedule published by J. R. Downing & Co. of Brighton, who deliver in Brighton and part of Brookline, shades the 1912 list by five cents per hundred pounds.

	1914.	1912.
100 lbs., 25 cents	15 cents
50 lbs., 15 cents	20 cents
25 lbs., 10 cents	10 cents

The price for Boston in the same six last year, as follows:

100 lbs.	25 cents
50 lbs.	15 cents
25 lbs.	10 cents

Cambridge ice cards read:

100 lbs.	25 cents
50 lbs.	20 cents
10 lbs.	10 cents

The reason for the slackness in Brookline and Brighton rates is given as follows by a dealer:

"There was a very small ice crop on the local ponds in the Winter of 1912-13. We cut only 1,000 tons, for instance, whereas we could have cut 5,000 this Winter, or about one-half our normal need.

"Last Summer we had to ship down ice from Milton, N. H., so much earlier. This year we can use local ice longer and the new rate is based on the home crop."

Dealers claim that ice in Brookline, Brighton and Cambridge has to bring more than ice in Boston because extra transfer charges from Charlestown have to be paid, also because there is heavy shrinkage on account of the delay in getting the ice pulled this short distance in the freight cars.

Your Grandmother's Remedy for Purifying the Blood

And Renovating the System in the Springtime

Ask for Sulpherb Tablets.

What was grandmother's unexcelled remedy? Haven't you heard of it? Yes, you have! It was sulphur, cream of tartar and molasses. The main trouble with it was its nauseous taste.

A modern method puts the cream of tartar and sulphur into a sugar-coated tablet and mixes them with herbs, roots, etc., making a wonderful tonic blood purifier and system cleanser.

Just try Sulpherb Tablets (not sulphur tablets), but Sulpherb—remember the name—and get the tablets in sealed tubes at 50c per tube.

Grown-up people and children who don't feel well, who are constipated or sluggish, or who have pimples, boils, carbuncles, ulcers and the like, can soon rid the system of these impurities by taking this good old-fashioned remedy in modern form. Their action satisfies or money is refunded by the Prescription Product Company, Dayton, Ohio. A free trial sent to any address. Buy of any well-stocked druggist.

WOMAN WEAK AND NERVOUS

Finds Health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Creston, Iowa.—"I suffered with female troubles from the time I came into womanhood until I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would have pains if I overworked or lifted anything heavy, and I would be so weak and nervous and in so much misery that I would be prostrated. A friend told me what your medicine had done for her and I tried it. It made me strong and healthy and our home is now happy with a baby boy. I am very glad that I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and do all I can to recommend it."—Mrs. A. B. Boscamp, 504 E. Howard Street, Creston, Iowa.

Tons of Roots and Herbs are used annually in the manufacture of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is known from ocean to ocean as the standard remedy for female ills.

For forty years this famous root and herb medicine has been preeminently successful in controlling the diseases of women. Merit alone could have stood this test of time.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to any of the women whose testimonial letters we are constantly publishing. They will tell you their experience and give you confidence to try the medicine.

"POPS" ON CAR TO GIRL ON HER WAY TO EUROPE

Among the hundreds of tourists who sailed for European vacations today on the Cretic, the most interesting was a Dorchester girl, traveling with her mother, who received an offer of the heart in a street car on the way to the ship. The young man was evidently in a desperate mood, for he made his proposal in the presence of the girl's mother, and in a voice loud enough to be heard by others.

It happened that others on the car were going on the ship so that the news soon whispered about on the decks, but when the reporters approached the young lady she refused to divulge her name or the reply she gave her suitor. As the big ship sailed she stood with her mother at the rail waving her bouquet of violets to her sweetheart on the dock. The wistful look on his face did not disclose the mystery of the reply he had received to his offer, for it was reasonable to suppose that he would look wistful in either case, under the circumstances.

Among the 225 tourists in the saloon list were Mlle. Dolores Galli of the Boston Opera Ballet, Mme. Le Ameaga, wife of the surgeon of the Boston Opera Company; Mrs. Cecil Reynolds, wife of the opera's secretary; Dr. W. T. Brickley of the Relief Hospital, Mrs. Annie Barney, E. B. Bayley, Mrs. Bayley, Miss Harriet Bayley, Miss E. E. Carroll, G. Frederick Davis, Mrs. G. H. Everett, Miss Everett, A. G. Everett, W. R. Fairclough, Mrs. H. S. Hall, Reuben Hing of Boston; Professor I. C. Flick of Syracuse University and party of eight; Dr. Frank W. Snow, Mrs. Leander M. Brown and Miss Ellen Brown of Newburyport.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD, TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is sign you have been eating too much meat.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and lazy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water holds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life-saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

All men can't be masters
All the fat is in the fire
An ill wind, an ill end
An ill wind blows nobody good
All your geese are swans

A night gift, every thanks
A wise man knows his own
A word before and two after
A work well begun is half-ended
Bad to-do but no serviceable
Bare words buy no butter
Be first in love, be last in war
Beggars should be content and not all
Before well, and it is well
Best to wed it while a long
Better be envied than pitied
Better well-off and a wife

Blow is stronger than words
Foolish wife spells a city
More afraid than hurt
Few words, many deeds
Fools are not all dead
Fools should not be governed
Fortune favors the brave
Forth the door to the cold
Guilt is always jealous
Hired hearts, small trust
I have a cow to chuck with you
Ignorance is a sweet sin
Idol love is soon cold

Love and a cough and fame
Love laughs at locksmiths
Love will creep where cows may not

Better half a loaf than no bread
Better feel than speak well
Company in misery makes it light
Content and courage lead to honor
Confess and be hanged
Content is the mother of love
It is never too late to mend
Dead men tell no tales
Dirt pacts good pottage
Dirty tongues will never dirty snow
Difficulty strikes deep
Dole is an evil sometime
Eat your own words after
Eye loves most have cool coats
Faith, and it is well
Fast leaves, fast bad fruit
Fortune favors the boldest
Friendship is an answer to sighing
Forgive the enemy after he hath sped
Good ale, hang
Grace is the leaf for the time
Good words will not a sack
Grass all, how all
Grind with steam
He doth teach that doth a thing well
He is no wise man
He that cannot put let him pray
Hunger is good sauce
Human blood is all one color
I am not the man I was
I have no more to say
Ill-gotten goods seldom prosper
Insensibles are dangerous
Jealousy is as cruel as friendship
It is cruel to strike it is do-well well
It is a bad house where a wife
Like a cat beware hot mail
Liberty and love
Like author, like book
Love is blind and lovers foolish
Learn to keep before you pay
Truth is a means, not an end.

CHAPTER I.

Friends wondered why Peter Corbin so seldom came to Paris. How the blithe beau, the most marauder of student days could hide himself away at little Merles—a butterfly metamorphosed backwards into a cocoon—they could not understand—until they went to Merles.

Until they saw Peter wandering in his little garden, reading by the open windows of the ancient villa or writing his stories on the veranda on a Summer afternoon. Until they saw the peace and cleanliness and comfort of his daily life. Until they saw Adrienne.

Ah, Adrienne!

Was it not she, perhaps, more than all else, that kept Peter out of Paris? They thought it was, and they—perhaps—were right.

Peter Corbin had found the roses glorious in the garden, the grapes rich upon the vines when he returned from college to his ancestral home. Since his father's death the new caretakers had made a little paradise of Rosemont. It was as if a magic hand had touch the old dull disorder into life and beauty. And it was just now with Adrienne.

The little daughter of old Paul Frantz, his father's life long friend, had burst into womanhood as simply, as suddenly as a rosebud into flower.

Grown up? Heaven forbid! Eternal childhood was beautifully writ upon those glowing cheeks, those lips of petal-pink, that golden hair. And in her heart. It seemed, life's everlasting Springtime reigned.

As a child he had been her protector and companion; as a youth he had quite forgotten her; as a man he loved her.

CHAPTER II.

When the wedding day was set, Peter wrote to his friends in Paris—wrote first to his bosom friend, Philip Sargent, one of the gay spirits of "L'Ecole Jeunesse," and still unscathed by the calamity of fame. Philip was an artist.

"Come to your wedding," he wrote. "Why, I shall disgrace you, my dear Peter. I cannot possibly do it. Nothing will come into my head, as I propose the toast but your past sins. To ask the 'worst boy' of old Parnasse's den to be the 'best man' of young Cupid's betrothal—it is a blasphemy. I shall be there."

He arrived, jubilant, merry as of old. Peter and Adrienne met him at the vine-clad gate.

"You have captured the Bastile that all Paris could not conquer, Mademoiselle," said Philip. "You have revolutionized the soul of Peter Corbin."

"Mademoiselle Guillotine," laughed Adrienne. "I do not like your compliments, Monsieur Sargent."

Laughing, they walked through the flower-eaved arbors through the glowing sunlight—into the darkness none of them could dream.

CHAPTER III.

Philip Sargent had come a week early, at the peremptory command of Peter. He fell in love with Merles. He no longer chided his friend for the self-inflicted exile. He asked if he might paint the portrait of Adrienne.

Peter was delighted. He watched the work daily, with the enthusiasm of the lover. To his clear, clean mind came never a thought that the artist's delicate hand was inspired by a deeper feeling that friendship for himself.

He did not know that Philip, on his daily strolls "in the garden," always stopped at Paul Frantz's cottage and talked with Adrienne. Peter knew nothing to harm his utter happiness until the Day of Days arrived.

On the Day of Days the wedding guests—the good people of Merles, of Tarne, of all the villages roundabout, assembled with Peter's friends from Paris.

While the music tinkled softly from the veranda of the villa, Peter chose, in his last hour of bachelorhood, to commune with the flowers. He strolled into the garden.

Where the brook ramified with the greensward and the roses to make a trelling for a rustic bench, he was attracted by the sound of voices. He moved forward indifferently. He peered through a rift in the shrubbery and saw Philip with Adrienne.

"It is NOT too late," Philip was saying. "You cannot give yourself to one whom you do not love. Look at me, I renounce my loyalty of friendship, my faith, my honor, for love. You say—you KNOW you love me. Why shall you sacrifice your life and happiness—why plunge your soul into the abyss of a joyless marriage, Adrienne?"

Peter saw the girl's eyes turn upon the man a look of shuddering reproach—but reproach that was hesitant. Stunned, stricken, crushed in soul and body as by a rending blow, he turned and fled to the house.

Blindly he passed the gathered throng upon the veranda. He hastened to his own room. While the music crooned cruelly to his ears, he penned a note, called his servant and prepared to leave Rosemont forever. The note that Philip Sargent read to Adrienne in the garden was this:

"Philip—Adrienne does not love me. I have discovered the truth. Marry her and make her happy. Good-by.

PETER."

Like a flash Philip sped from the garden to the house, Adrienne followed, breathless, remorseful.

The artist crashed into Peter's room, tore from his hand the revolver he was holding, hesitant, before the mirror.

"Pete, for God's sake, don't."

"Philip, I don't blame you—but I heard."

"You—heard—"

"Yes."

There was a long silence. The sound of a woman's sobs came to the men from the other side of the door.

"But I am not going to kill myself. I am not going to blight your happiness," said Peter in a choking voice. "I am just going away. Pish, good-by."

And he was gone.

CHAPTER IV.

For eighteen years, Peter Corbin had been a wanderer. There are some strong men who, in wounds, violence and action is solace. Peter was one of these. He had fought in South Africa, explored the deadly gold-cliff of Brazil, as war correspondent or warrior and swung his restless way from Port Arthur to Johannesburg, from Adrianople to Vera Cruz.

Word of Adrienne's unhappiness, of her death after all years with Philip had come to him long, long ago, in a letter from her father. The wound in the rankling pain of the wound at least—was cured. But he could never bring himself, he thought, to return to the old scenes. He had never even been in France since the Day of Days.

It was a letter just received in New York, while he was preparing for an Arctic expedition, that changed his mind. It was the last letter that Auld Paul Frantz ever wrote.

"My boy, come back," he said, "I am very old; the years hang heavy on me and the little Rita—my Adrienne's child—is a woman grown. Her father cared for her, carried with him to obtain her custody. I am too old to fight, but I will die fighting to save the child from the man who killed my Adrienne. Come home and help me."

Peter went home.

CHAPTER V.

The roses were in bloom in Rosemont. The vines, beneath their treasuring leaves, held growing chestnuts. The air was sweet with mignonette. The brook gleamed in the sun.

Peter had thought to shut his eyes upon it all. He had looked forward to his visit dreadfully. It had seemed to him the unendurance of a tomb—a tomb of memories.

But it was not like that. The years by thought had hardened all his dreams had only hallowed them. He fetched deep of the sweetness of the garden. The trembling hand of Paul Frantz warmed him to the heart. And there—before him at the old man's side—there was the Past re-written, the dead restivified. There was—Adrienne!

He knew it was not Adrienne. But only the hand of God could have made so wonderful a counterpart.

Exactly as she had stood among the roses, Rita, the daughter, stood, and, blushing like the rosen, spoke to the man her mother once had loved.

Again we build in fear. To visions and the phantasms of life (and ah! how real they are) we give kinship of the devil and the dead. But visions may be happy, holy. Ghosts may bear glamour of memories, of inspirations and of love that we THOUGHT dead. Phantasms are sometimes gifts of God.

Thus was Rita.

The man whose shattered love had sent him into exile came home to find the re-ennoblement of love.

What if the steel-gray spears of strife and suffering pierced his black air? What if the desert suns, the fountain winds had seamed and seared him? At forty, Peter Corbin was manly. But, looking on his visions—his dream—why, Peter Corbin was a boy again.

CHAPTER VI.

They met under the low-ceiled roof of the Frants cottage—Peter and Rita.

"Good! You!"

"I," said Peter, calmly.

"I thought you were dead. I—Peter, don't you want to shake hands with me?"

"No."

"What do you mean by that?"

"I told you to make her happy. You ruined her life. You ruined mine."

"And so you think that YOU can claim my child?"

"I think I can defend her."

While Philip sneeringly turned to the old Paul Frantz and unfolded the legal papers giving him custody of his daughter, Peter left the house unseen. But, looking on his visions—his dream—why, Peter Corbin was a boy again.

Peter, I cannot possibly do it. Nothing will come into my head, as I propose the toast but your past sins. To ask the 'worst boy' of old Parnasse's den to be the 'best man' of young Cupid's betrothal—it is a blasphemy. I shall be there."

He arrived, jubilant, merry as of old. Peter and Adrienne met him at the vine-clad gate.

"You have captured the Bastile that all Paris could not conquer, Mademoiselle," said Philip. "You have revolutionized the soul of Peter Corbin."

"Mademoiselle Guillotine," laughed Adrienne. "I do not like your compliments, Monsieur Sargent."

Laughing, they walked through the flower-eaved arbors through the glowing sunlight—into the darkness none of them could dream.

SULLIVAN AND FLYNN BTH CONFIDENT OF VICTRY IN CAMBRIDGE BOT TONIGHT

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

BASEBALL WORLD MOURNS DEATH OF RUBE WADDELL GAME'S STRANGEST PITCHER

SULLIVAN AND FLYNN IN TRIM FOR BIG BOUT

BOUTS TONIGHT.

Jack Twin Sullivan vs. Porky Flynn, Joe Gorman vs. Finney Boyle, Teddy Murphy vs. John O'Brien and Joe Lucente vs. Kid Lee, Eighth Regiment Armory, Cambridge.

Riverside B. C., Cyprus Hall, Cambridge, open amateur tournament and special bouts between Henry Browne vs. John McInnis and Steve Phillips vs. J. J. Sullivan.

Joe Carroll vs. Finney Boyle, Kid Thomas vs. Gardner Brooks and Tom Murphy vs. Tony Marengo, Lawrence.

By RINGSIDE.

With both principals in the main bout in good condition and the troubles of the directors apparently at an end, the sparkling boxing meeting of the Co. E, Eighth Regiment Athletic Association in the Cambridge Armory tonight should be about as interesting a fistic affair as has been seen about Boston in some time.

* * *

Both Porky Flynn and Jack "Twin" Sullivan, who ten ten rounders in the main bout, look fit for the go and with the chance to sign up for several good bouts in this locality while the game is on its present tide of good fortune, both should work hard to win a decision that will leave no room for doubt.

* * *

Jack "Twin" appears to have put on considerable weight since he last appeared in these parts. He has been in Buffalo, where he had easy victories in the couple of fights he engaged in and claims that the added heft will not prove the least handicap to him.

* * *

Flynn also has been working hard, and wants to win because he feels that he is at least as good as many of the present white hope candidates, and realizes that a decision against him in this mill would practically settle his hash as far as main bouts in the future are concerned.

* * *

For a time yesterday afternoon it looked as if the show was all off. Colonel Graves of the Eighth Regiment informed the directors of the A. A. that after a consultation with Governor Walsh he had come to the conclusion that it was best not to hold the fights.

* * *

The directors of the meeting, however, got busy and soon straightened matters out so that unless there are further developments today everything will pass off smoothly. The work of putting up the ring was started last night and arrangements for a crowd well over a thousand completed.

* * *

The meeting will start promptly at 8 o'clock with a six-round battle between Joe Lucente and Kid Lee. Teddy Murphy and Johnny O'Brien and Finney Boyle and Joe Gorman will also clash in six-round affairs, as preliminaries to the star go that is between the heavies. Joe Cummings of the B. A. A. will be the third man in the ring. Members of the company in uniform will act as ushers.

* * *

Despite the pre-counter attraction, applications for tickets for the Riverside A. A. amateur show would indicate that the exciting tonight will draw a full house. Starring the two New England champions, Steve Phillips and Henry Browne in the special bouts proved a ten strike, as both these lads made decided hits by their showing in the title bouts last Saturday night.

* * *

None but bona fide members of the Neptune A. C. will be admitted to the Joe Eagan-Johnny Dee show and no 102 Dartmouth street tomorrow night. The heads of the club have decided to be unusually strict at regards admittance. To accommodate all who wish to be members, the club's office in room 312, Winthrop Building, will be open till 6 o'clock tonight and tomorrow night.

* * *

Milwaukee will soon rival some of the coast cities as a fight town, if Promoter Tom Andrews is allowed to go his merry way without any hindrance. His latest effort will bring together Gunboat Smith and Jim Moha late in the present month for ten rounds. Though Smith will have all the best of matters, as far as weight and reach go, Moha is confident he can get a decision. His victory over the husky Levinskey has filled Bob with confidence and he has an ambitious program mapped out provided he makes a good showing against the "Gunboat."

CAMP SAYS OXFORD WILL SEND STARTLING GROUP OF MILERS TO THE PENN RACES

Written for the Boston American.

By WALTER CAMP.

The relay team which is to represent Oxford in the four-mile race at the Penn relay races April 25, has finally been definitely determined. Three of the men, whom we have mentioned and described in previous articles, are to come: namely, A. S. Jackson, that wonderful runner who showed his class in the last Olympics, and who is now president of the Oxford club; N. S. Taber, now Rhodes scholar at Oxford, but who made his record in running here in America from Brown University, and C. M. Sproule, the Oxford cross-country man; the fourth man is D. N. Gaussen, who is the present cross-country champion of Oxford.

It represents a startling group of milers, and it will be particularly interesting to see their work if they are all in good condition.

PLAYGROUND MOVEMENT ON SOLID FOOTING.

One of the strongest adherents of the playground movement, writing last year of a psychological clinic, maintained that the difference between us and the ancient Greeks is that they cared for the strong and sometimes left the weak to perish, whereas we care tenderly for the weak and often leave the strong to the tender mercies of diseases. Of the two plans, the Greek, though somewhat heartless, would appear to be of the greater public good.

He further commented that in several of the States, previous to this playground movement, any child to obtain the very best educational advantage must be be blind, deaf, feeble-minded, incorrigible or a truant, because only under those conditions was he given exercises, playgrounds, gymnasiums, etc., and for in abundance, gardens and play shops. The great majority of normal children had to get along the best they could without these.

START IN RIGHT DIRECTION.

We have t ade a start in the right direction. Now comes the problem of the proper management and direction of this great playground movement. Competent instruction and, above all, the greatest care in the selection of these instructors for their high moral purpose is the prime essential.

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL ON IN EAST TODAY

Baseball by big league teams will open in the East today.

The world's champion Athletics and the Phillies will play the first game of their Spring series in Philadelphia this afternoon, while the Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Yankees will clash in the initial game of their series on the new Ebbets field, Brooklyn.

The opening game of the Philadelphia series was to have been played yesterday, but rain interfered. Connie Mack and "Red" Dooin are very anxious to get a line on their players, as are the Philadelphia "fans". The Phillies were hit hard by the Federal League raids, but Dooin claims he has rounded out a good team. This he will have a chance to prove when his team faces the Mackmen this afternoon.

The Yankees regulars pulled into the "big town" from Baltimore last night, while the Dodgers reached Brooklyn early in the day, coming from Washington, where they administered a sweet shutout to Clark Griffith's Senators.

Manager Chance of the Yankees shipped Pitchers Cole, Keating and Warhop ahead of the rest of the team and these are the men who will hurl against the Dodgers in the opener this afternoon. Ed Reulbach, who was a member of the Cubs when Chance was manager, will probably work against the Yankees for several innings.

DEVLIN MAKES RECORD

Rookie Gets Rapid Tryout

HIRED, FIRED IN ½ HOUR

OAKLAND, Cal., April 2.—Arthur Devlin, who used to star around third base for the New York Giants and the Boston Braves, and who is now directing the destinies of the Oakland Pacific Coast team, has established a new record in trying out a rookie.

A youth named Dion was signed, tried and canned all within a half hour the other day.

Devlin first signed him at the lowest bush figures, presented him with a suit, chased him out to the field, batted a couple of easy flies at him and then fired him.

GEORGE E. PHAIR SAYS:

SOME JUMP.

A baseball magnate is a chump
To holler when his players jump;
He is a foolish cuss,
How right would be his present woe
Had he but felt the cruel blow
That once befell us.

Upon our team in years gone by
We had a puny little guy
Who jumped and left us flat.
He couldn't hit or field or hunt,
And yet, the gol darn little runt,
He owned the ball and bat.

We are glad to hear that the Kentucky University baseball team has called off its strike. Our national pastime is saved.

We see by the Michigan papers that Cornell recently nosed out Michigan in a track meet. We also see that the score was 44 to 27, leading one to suspect that Cornell used "Buck" Herzog's nose.

The battle between Messrs. Ritchie and Murphy is scheduled to take place in April. So was April Fool's day.

TEMPTED.

Speak to me only with thy coin
And I will gladly sign.
Before the Federal League I join
I surely must get mine.
Ten thousand clear to play a year
Would be a jolly dicker.
So speak to me only with thy coin
And I will gladly sign.

AT LEAST, THEY SAY HE IS BACK.

Oh, great was the fun when the Prodigal Son
Returned with his stuff and his pack.
But that won't be in it, not even a minute,
When Wood and his arm come back.

When Amos Rusie was in his prime he drew a salary of $5,200 a year, but if he had had any desire to jump in those days he would have had to jump to a lumber yard.

A study of Frank Moran's career convinces one that as a fighter he is a marvelous press agent.

ROUGH WATER MAKES HARVARD 'FEATHER' HIGH

A choppy sea below the Harvard Bridge gave the Crimson crews an opportunity of working out in rough water. Heretofore the crews have held their practices on calm water, but as all the races to come are not likely to be held under these conditions the work-out was valuable.

It taught the men to feather high and to pull the stroke through fast. One of the chief faults of the varsity at present is the lack of a good clean finish. Some of the men are inclined to be too hasty at the end of their stroke and jerk their oar out before the others. Stress is being laid on taking the blade of the oar out smoothly and then to shoot the hands away fast. Another fault is that of keeping ahead of the stroke. During the long row the stroke was occasionally quickened, the object being to get in and out together a little improvement was noticed in this.

Jim Talcott, who was recently promoted from the "second," is giving great promise in developing into finished varsity oar. Talcott, who hails from New York, never pulled an oar before he came to Harvard. He came out for the freshmen crew in the Fall, rowing on one of the lower freshmen eights. Just before the Cornell race last year he was placed at No. 2 in the first, and rowed in that position the rest of the season. Last Saturday, after the "second" had defeated the varsity in a mile race, he was promoted to No. 2 in that boat. He is in the class of 1916.

The two freshmen crews had a couple of brushes, the first was won by the "second," while the second one was taken by the first. In the first brush the freshmen were completely out of time, everyone catching ahead of time. The men were rushing down on their slides and slugging at the catch. In the second brush, however, they found themselves, and rowed a little more nearly together. The second freshmen is made up of a number of heavy men, and although they lack finish they have power. There will probably be another race between the two varsities next Saturday afternoon to test out the working of the new orders.

Zbyszko Downs Two.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 2.—Stanislaw Zbyszko, the world's champion wrestler, defeated Jack Leon in twelve minutes and Tom Connolly in seven minutes. The Pole agreed to down the two men within one hour. The bout was held under the auspices of the Montgomery Athletic Club and witnessed by a capacity crowd.

HALL CAINE'S GREATEST STORY

THE NARRATIVE OF MARY O'NEILL

Copyright, 1912, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyright, 1913, by Hearst's Chronicle. Copyright in Great Britain. Copyright, 1913, by J. B. Lippincott Company.

Mary becomes convinced that Martin is dead, although the reader learns, through a memorandum by the explorer, that he was safe all the time. Mary undergoes great hardships and when she thinks of the future that lies before her baby, she prays that it may be born dead.

* * *

The night passed heavily. I heard m. (if (as I had done before) calling m Martin in a voice of wild entre...

"Martin! Martin!"

Then remembering that he was gone I began again to pray. I heard myself praying to the Blessed Virgin:

"Oh, Mother of my God, let my child ...

But a voice which seemed to come from far away interrupted me.

"Hush, hush, hush! It will make it harder for thee."

At length peace came. It seemed to me that I was running out of tempestuous sea, with its unlimited loneliness and cruel depth, into a quiet harbor.

There was a heavenly calm, in which I could hear the doctor and the nurse and my Welsh landlady talking together in cheerful whispers.

I knew that everything was over, and with the memory of the storm I had passed through still in my heart and brain, I said:

"Is it dead?"

"Dead?" cried the nurse in a voice. "Dear heart no, but alive and well. A beautiful little girl!"

"Yes, your baby is all right ma'am," said the doctor, and then my Welsh landlady cried:

"Why did'st think it would be dead, bach? As I am a Christian woman thee'st got the beautifulest baby that ever breathed."

I could hear no more. The dark thoughts of the days before were over me still, and with a groan I turned to the wall. Then everything was wiped out as by an angel's wing, and I fell into a deep sleep.

When I awoke my dark thoughts were vanished away like a bad dream in the morning. The rain had ceased, the gas had been put out, and I could see by the glow on the peonies of the wall-paper that the sun was shining with a soft red light through the holland blinds of my windows.

I heard the sparrows chirping on the sills outside; I heard the milkman rattling his cans; I heard the bells of a neighboring church ringing for early communion.

I closed my eyes and held my breath and listened to the sounds in my own room. I heard the kettle singing over the fire; I heard somebody humming softly and beating a foot on the floor in time to the tune, and then I heard a low voice (it was Emmerdale) saying from somewhere near my bed:

"I dunno but what she's awake. Her breathing ain't a-goin' now."

Then I turned and saw the nurse sitting before the fire with something on he' lap. I knew what it was. It was my child, and it was asleep. In the spite of my dark thoughts, my heart yearned for it.

And then came the great miracle.

My child awoke and began to cry. It was a faint cry, oh, so thin and weak, but it went thundering and thundering through me. There was a moment of awful struggle, and then a mighty torrent of love swept over me.

If was Motherhood.

My child! Mine! Flesh of my flesh! Oh God! Oh God!

All my desire for my baby's death to save it from the pains of life was gone, and my heart, starved so long, throbbed with tenderness. I raised myself in bed, in spite of my nurse's protest, and cried to her to give me my baby.

"Give her to me. Give her to me."

"By and by, by and by," said the nurse.

"Now! Now! I can wait no longer."

"But you must take some food first. Emma-Jane, give her that glass of milk with water."

I drank the milk just to satisfy them, and then held out my arms for my child.

"Give her to me—quick, quick!"

"Here she is then, the jewel.

Oh! the joy of that moment when I first took my baby in my arms, and looked down her face, and saw its own features and the sea-blue eyes of Martin! Oh the rapture of my first kiss!

I suppose I must have been rough with my little stranger in the fervor of my love, for she began to cry again.

"There! there!" said the nurse. "Be good now, or I must take baby away."

But heaven had taught me another lesson, and instantly, instinctively I put my baby to my breast. Instantly and instinctively, too, my baby turned to it with its little mouth open and its little head back, and began to suck.

"Oh God! oh Mother of my God!"

And then in that happiness that is beyond all earthly happiness—the happiness of a mother when she first clasps her baby to her breast—I began to cry.

I had not cried for months—not since that night in Milan when I did not wish to remember any more—but now my tears gushed out and ran down my face like rain.

I cried on Martin once more—I could not help it. And looking down at the closed eyes of my child my soul gushed out in gratitude to God, who had sent me this for all I had suffered.

"Hush, hush! You will do yourself a mischief and it will be bad for the milk." said the nurse.

After that I tried to control myself. But I found a fierce and feverish delight in suckling my child. It seemed as if every drop my baby drew from me a spiritual as well as a physical joy—cooling my blood and my brain and wiping out all my troubles.

Oh mystery of mysteries! Oh miracle of miracles!

My baby was at my breast and my sufferings were at an end

* * *

Mary suffers terrible hardships in trying to earn a living for herself and her baby. Things go from bad to worse and when it is learned that she is the mother of a fatherless child she finds it impossible to get work. In her desperation, to save her baby's life, she determines to go upon the streets. She paints her face and walks the street for hours, trying to nerve herself to the sacrifice, she reminds herself of her child and its need.

* * *

My sweet darling! My Isabel, my only treasure! Martin's child and mine!

That put a quick end to all my qualms. Again I bit my lip until it bled, and told myself that I should speak to the very next man who came along.

Yes, the very next man who comes along," I thought.

I was standing at that moment in the shadow of one of the pilasters of the loggia, almost leaning against it, and in the silence of the street I heard distinctly the sharp firm step of somebody coming my way.

It was a man. As he came near me he slowed down and stopped. He was then immediately behind me. I heard his quick breathing. I felt that his eyes were fixed on me. One sidelong glance told me that he was wearing a long ulster and a cap, that he was young, tall, powerfully built, had a strong firm, clean-shaven face, and an indescribable sense of the open air about him.

"Now, now!" I thought, and (to prevent myself from running away) I turned quickly round to him and tried to speak.

But I said nothing. I did not know what women say to men under such circumstances. I found myself trembling violently, and before I was aware of what was happening I had burst into tears.

Then came another blinding moment and a tempest of conflicting feelings.

I felt that the man had laid hold of me; that his strong hands were grasping my arms, and that he was looking into my face. I heard his voice. It seemed to belong to no waking moment but to some out of the hours of sleep.

"Mary! Mary!"

I looked up at him, but before my eyes could carry the news to my brain I knew who it was—I knew, I knew, I knew!

"Don't be afraid! It's I."

Then something—God knows what—made me struggle to escape, and I cried:

"Let me go"

But even while I was struggling—trying to fly away from my greatest happiness—I was praying with all my might that the strong arms would hold me, conquer me, master me.

They did. And then something seemed to give way within my head, and through a roaring that came into my brain I heard the voice again, and it was saying:

"Quick, Sister, call a cab. Open the door, O'Sullivan. No, leave her to me. I've got her, thank God."

And then blinding darkness fell over me and everything was blotted out.

But only a moment afterwards (or it seemed to be a moment) memory came back in a great swelling wave of joy. Though I did not open my eyes I knew that I was safe and baby was safe, and all was well. Somebody—it was the same beloved voice again—was saying:

"Molly! My Molly! My poor, long-suffering darling! My own again, God bless her!"

It was he, it was Martin, my Martin. And, oh Mother of my Lord, he was carrying me upstairs in his arms.

* * *

Mary is sick for a long time, and when she is convalescent, she and Martin go to Elkhu Isuthner and Mary has her old room at the home of Martin's parents. Martin goes to Canada. Has gone to Canada when Mary's husband, who later gets a divorce from Mary. Then Martin wants to marry her, but Father Dan tells her that, although the law has freed her, she is still Lord Kin's wife in the eyes of the church. Mother Magdalene also comes and tells her the same thing and urges her to leave the world and enter the convent. Mary becomes very ill.

* * *

August 7. I have made up my mind to write to Martin. One can say things so much easier in a letter—I can, anyway. Even my voice affects me—swelling and falling when I am moved like a billow on the ocean.

I find my writing cannot any longer be done in a sitting position at a desk, but I can prop my book on my breast and write lying down.

Mary O'Neill's Letter to Martin Conrad

August 9th, 6 a. m.

My Own Darling—Strengthen yourself for what I am going to say. It will be very hard for you—I know that, dear.

Tomorrow we were to have gone to the High Bailiff's. His day was to be we were to have sailed for Sydney, and two months hence we were to have reached Winter Quarters.

But I cannot go with you to the High Bailiff's; I cannot go with you to Sydney; I cannot go with you to Winter Quarters; I cannot go anywhere from here. It is impossible, impossible, impossible.

I have loved too much, dear, so the power of life is burnt out for me. My great love—love for my mother, for my darling baby, and above all for you—has consumed me and I cannot live much longer.

Forgive me for not telling you this before—for deceiving you by saying that I was getting better and growing stronger when I knew I was not. But I did think it was cowardice which kept me from telling you the truth, but I see now that it was love, too.

I was so greedy of the happiness I have had since I came to this house of love that I could not reconcile myself to the loss of it. You will try to understand that (won't you, dear?), and so forgive me for keeping you in the dark down to the very last moment.

Bashful Bob

The Amusing Adventures of a Shy Young Man

By STELLA FLORES

No. 9—He Finds That the Green-Eyed Monster Is No Myth

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

OUT in the shadows of the garden, Bob scowled moodily at one of the windows of the big house, with its tightly drawn shades. He discovered that outside of story books a young man, acting as chauffeur in the home of a charming heiress, has few opportunities to speak to her. The fact that her eyes were sweet and gentle, when they met his, only made his enforced indifference harder. He started again and again to tell her that he was not poor—that he loved her. Then the old bashfulness that she had charmed away swept over him like an icy blast, leaving him numb and tongueless. His only comfort was that he could at least catch glimpses of her. As he looked two shadows appeared on the shade—Orchid, and the hated features of the French count the gossips said her mother wished her to marry. And a little green-eyed demon that had been peering into the window crawled down, and sunk its teeth and claws into his heart.

THE next afternoon Cupid sauntered up the drive to see how his favorites were progressing. He chuckled contentedly, slaying an arrow at a passing bird. The blare of an auto horn as a great gray demon bore down upon him made him jump wildly for safety. A terrified glance over his shoulder, and his fat little legs nearly doubled under him. For there, in the lamps of the machine Bob drove at such a breakneck speed, he saw clearly reflected the slit green eyes of the jealous monster that was tearing at Bob's heart. Then Cupid ran for his very life. For well he knew that if Jealousy, his arch enemy, ever really caught him, it would tear him to pieces. In the back seat the French Count clutched his silk hat convulsively and raved strange things in a strange tongue, while Orchid, her cheeks pale, sat very still, wondering if Bob had gone suddenly mad.

A THRILLING STORY OF TODAY—HOW A PRETTY GIRL WON HER FIGHT FOR LOVE AGAINST TREMENDOUS ODDS

By WEBSTER DENISON

Her mother's joy at her early return, her enthusiastic recital of the many uses to which this third week's wage could be put, and her pride in her little girl who could bring so much money into the home more than repaid Gertrude. It made amends, almost for her shame, and fortified her to her determination to continue at work. There must be a limit to Scott's insolence. In a public office, in a public building of this kind, he could not pursue her too far.

She was sustained, too, by some mysterious influence and sense of protection. Perhaps if Gertrude could have analyzed her feelings she would have found this influence was a welcome one, a very powerful factor in helping her to reach her heroic decision.

Since that trip to fairyland in the big motor car Gertrude had seen young Scott only in the office. He had asked her again and again to take another ride with him. She knew she wanted to, but she didn't dare. She liked this young junior partner better than she had ever liked any one in the world except her mother and her brothers.

She didn't describe to herself just what this admiration was, but she knew she always felt a quickening of the pulse whenever Jack appeared and a sense of loneliness when he went out and left her with Scott.

She was groping in that mystic realm of love where tender dreams enchant the youthful mind. She longed in her own heart for Jack, but her relations with his step-father prohibited this.

THE TRAP SEEN

There was in Gertrude an inborn sense of decency. She saw the trap into which she had fallen and in the loneliness of her miserable tenement room hot tears trickled down on to the pillow while she choked back sobs that would have awakened Heine and Rudie.

She returned to the office Monday morning with a quaking heart, but firm in her purpose to fight it out. She found Scott cheerful, not offensively cordial and apparently unmindful of what to her was a tragedy two days before.

He gave her a quantity of routine dictation and she went back to her desk to transcribe it. She cast covert glances at him from time to time, but he was usually occupied with his papers. At length she felt instinctively that he was looking at her. She glanced up and their eyes met.

"You still seem unhappy, little secretary," he said. "I hope you will forgive me for what happened yesterday afternoon, for I am sincerely and deeply sorry. I am only a man now and then I go to pieces for a moment—but I always regret it directly I regain my composure."

A PRESENT.

He arose and came slowly toward her. He carried in his hand a little box. He stopped before her.

"I want to give you a little peace offering, as it were," he said timidly, and opening the box revealed a lovely stone diamond ring.

She whirled around in her chair and got up. Unconsciously she shrank away from him, and he saw or feigned that he was deeply hurt by her aversion.

"Don't be childish, little girl. I offer you this little trinket with no strings attached, just as from friend to friend. Won't you take it?"

"I can't," she answered hoarsely; "I wouldn't dare. Please don't—I don't know why you are so—with me," said the millionaire, with an injured air. "I had thought—made—for some one else, to be truthful. The some one else turned out to be an ungrateful, heartless person. I offer it to you in all honesty and good faith. You refuse it. I have told you again and again that you may safely leave the question of the propriety to me."

"But I haven't always found it safe, Mr. Scott."

"Oh, come now—you mean because I lost my head a bit the other afternoon. I have told you that I am sincerely sorry."

He advanced closer. Trapped and cornered, all her courageous resolutions failed her. She backed away from him towards the wall. She was afraid.

"I hope—Mr. Scott—you will not force me to leave. I have been here for three weeks; my mother has known the first rest for years. I thought I would be so happy here, and I want so badly to keep on earning enough money to keep my mother from the washtub."

"And why shouldn't you? You will, of course, you will."

"But if I am to stay——"

"Stay? Why, certainly you'll stay. You are not thinking of leaving?"

"Then I must ask you, please, to let me go to lunch alone—and to——"

"To what?"

"I don't know just what to say. I am afraid—I am afraid! but oh, Mr. Scott, I just can't give up my position—I just can't."

"You won't do that. I won't hear of it, little secretary. You know that I have told you I want to be a friend of yours. Now don't you think that you are just a little, widowyed child dodging shadows and shivering from something just because it's new and you don't entirely grasp it?"

She was on the verge of tears. She struggled to retain composure.

"I don't know," she stammered. "I could be so happy here if only—you would—if I could just take dictation and that would be all."

A Bachelor's Diary

Max Returns Home Only to Be Greeted by a Dramatic Piece of News.

By MAX

MARCH 16—I took Mrs. Martin Post shopping with me one day and bought under her direction a diamond solitaire for my pretty nurse; a pearl-studded watch for Manette and a cameo pin for Richards, whose goodness, and also plainness, have mercifully prevented her from ever becoming a problem to me. Would to heaven there were more women like her!

Then the day I sailed I went to the cemetery with Martin's widow to place a wreath of immortelles on his grave, at which time she was so overcome by her grief, she put her arms around my neck and wept on my shoulder.

Do you know, Diary, it must be a terrible thought to a husband to look across the sea at his wife, and know that should he die first some other man will wipe her tears away?

March 18—My little family was at the dock when I landed; attended by Tompkins, the faithful soul.

"Lucky dog," I heard a man behind me say, "to be going home to a handsome wife and child like that."

"Lucky family," a woman's voice trilled; "he was by all odds the most distinguished looking man on board."

I didn't wonder at the compliments for my pretty nurse and my niece, but wondered at the one for myself. At home, where I am generally rated because I have had the misfortune to acquire a few millions, no one thinks me distinguished-looking. It was a new sensation to hear it said, and not at all unpleasant. Indeed, I rather liked it, but the next moment had forgotten both speaker and compliment for I had Magnette in my arms and was holding fast with one hand to the arm of a pretty girl in brown, the widow of poor dear Martin and Sally Spencer alike forgotten.

HAPPY AGAIN

It was good to get home, Diary. It was good to hear a child express love in a child's fashion, and it was good to hear the outspoken rejoicing of my servants, and, better than all, to catch the sly glances of happiness the pretty nurse does not express, and to hear her say that it has been like an old fairies' home with me out me, and that now I have returned they won't have to depend on the brown gulp for excitement.

I learned without asking that Sally and Jack had gone south and were still away. Then my heart sank. Not at sorrow to be alone with her, you know, but when a man wrestles in the woods with his conscience and comes forth resolved to resist temptation, there is a sort of slump in the enjoyment of his high moral attitude to find that temptation gone.

You see, Diary, I had determined to wage war on Sally's house very boldly when her husband was not there, talk to her on my trip, discuss Manette's education and the income tax, inquire fervently of Jack's health and deplore his absence, and then, taking my hat, to depart, perhaps to call again next day. I decided on circumstances—decide for me whether I should or should not shake hands with her, rather favoring a handshake and perhaps a little lingering of the clasp, that I might show myself and also her that I had myself in control.

HE IS DISAPPOINTED.

I had even decided that if she attempted to kiss me I would make no resistance, for to resist would show that I was afraid, and I wasn't that. No, not I! So it was with a feeling of disappointment that I learned she had gone. I planned so fruitless a good intention to key one's self up to resist temptation and to find the temptation gone. I felt, in the recurring slump of my spiritual exaltation, as if I had been cheated.

March 19—I received a bunch of letters from Sally this morning; she had decided to post them all from here, sure I had returned, but had written every day, and they read like the form of a diary. She is at the hotel where I spent a Winter years ago, and Mrs. Brown is there, too.

"But when Jack goes out with her in his car," she writes, "I go out with the Count on the mules, and find much satisfaction in the thought that there are many lovely spots on the lake that are off the road."

Now, what does she mean by that? "We have tried all the corners on the veranda that you occupied with Mrs. Brown a year ago," she wrote later, "and find all equally delightful in their remoteness from the dance and card rooms. The Count reminds me much of you."

I had read all of the letters, some of them twice, and they had put me in such a savage mood I neglected to take advantage of the fact that for the first time since I returned I was alone in the room with my pretty attendant. I had never given her the ring I bought in Paris. This seemed a good opportunity.

"You look cross," she remarked.

The thought of Sally compromising herself with some tin parrot of a French count was enough to make me cross, but I could not tell this to her, especially as a prelude to asking her to marry me.

With an effort to put all other women out of mind, I presume that is what an honorable man should do when he proposes marriage, I walked over to my companion, and, kneeling over her chair, compelled her, by putting one hand under her chin, to look me in the eyes.

"You belong to me——" I began, in real Cave-man fashion — then the doorbell rang, and, turning, I saw Tompkins in the door with a telegram in his hand.

"Stay where you are," I commanded my nurse. "I have something to say to you when I have read this."

But I never said it, for when I had opened the envelope and unfolded the sheet of paper it held, there fairly leaped into my eyes these words:

"Jack is dead. Come at once. Sally."

Do You Know That—

Three good laughs an hour and three square meals and three hours' work or play each day is the recipe given by Mrs. Thomas Bennett, of Brooklyn, N. Y., for living as she has done to the age of 102 in the full enjoyment of her faculties.

On the ground that they would be of use to a hostile army in war time, the French War Minister has prohibited the painting of the names of French towns on the fronts of their railway stations to guide airmen.

The New Labor Gazette, of Odessa, made its forty-seventh appearance under the direction of its eleventh editor, whose ten predecessors are all in prison.

WALL STREET IS BLAMED FOR RAILROAD ILLS

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

"Out on the prairies we can see and be seen long distance.

"You fellows here in Wall Street think that because you are surrounded with skyscrapers and mass in narrow, crowded streets you cannot be seen, and that the people throughout the country cannot tell what you are doing.

"Don't fool yourselves.

"The people have their eye on you and are quick to discuss what you do.

* * *

"It takes brains to run a railroad—to keep the cars moving, to keep the engines in order, to keep the men interested in their work, to study economies, to think out reductions in grades and the thousand other things considered in keeping the transportation machine going smoothly and satisfactorily.

"But it isn't much to brag about if you buy a block of bonds at 40 and issue them to the public at 80."

* * *

That straight-from-the-shoulder oration was delivered to certain influential Wall Street bankers by a practical railroad man, risen from the ranks, who used to be on the outside but who is now very much in the inside, a figure of national prominence, moving among the richest of the rich but not corroded, and in a position to have his words listened to.

* * *

"Wall Street," he said to me, "has done more to hurt the railroads that all the politicians, the public and the Interstate Commerce Commission combined. The public feel—and with good reason—that they have not been given fair treatment when they have invested their savings in securities. Some of the things done in Wall Street have been sickening. People have got rich who had no business to get a dollar. The insiders have not scrupulously taken advantage of their position to make money speculating against a blindfolded public."

* * *

"But aren't things improving?" I asked.

* * *

"Yes, but the public still get occasion to complain. Why, think of the plight of the man who recently, say, a thousand shares of Chesapeake & Ohio. Without one word of warning that anything was contemplated that would lower the value of the holdings, the insiders announced a financial deal that immediately sends the price of his acquisition down $14,000. Can you blame him if he complains that the insiders had extraordinary opportunities to speculate very profitably in the shares? I took the trouble to tabulate the daily transactions in these shares on the Stock Exchange before and after the recent news, and the whole thing does not look well."

* * *

That is one side.

* * *

Now listen to this, from an international banker identified with important railroad financing:

"The amount of money we put up and take extraordinary narrow margins of profit we can get at the best make the underwriting business far from lucrative. And one bad issue will wipe out the commissions on half a dozen successful ones. It is not an unmixed pleasure to guarantee to supply a railroad with $25,000,000 or $50,000,000 capital when it needs it. The compensation is unbelievably small. The bankers who raise huge amounts of money for railroads have a full measure of service for what they receive."

* * *

I understand that the largest international banking firms in America have compiled figures showing exactly what compensation they have received in their underwritings and other banking services to railroads. The net profits, I am told, would be a revelation to the public, as small are they said to be. In view of the general opinion concerning "take-offs," it would be wise for all prominent banking firms to make public their records, provided they have nothing to hide, for the anti-capital spirit stalking the country today is an element of the gravest danger, fraught with unthinkable possibilities.

* * *

The charge has been made—improperly, I think—that bankers have encouraged the issuance of short-term notes so as to reap repeated commissions. Well, it will be interesting to learn that the leading bankers of the country have decided to set their faces sternly against short-date notes. These experiences instruct us hereafter will be resorted to only in cases where neither bonds nor stock can possibly be marketed. Bonds will be used instead of notes, even when apparently a sacrifice has to be incurred, as notes have a habit of proving expensive in the end. And they usually fall due at an awkward moment.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks averaged higher this afternoon than they did at the close yesterday and although advances were small in the case of most issues they were general. The conditions which obtained earlier in the week still prevailed. There is a large short interest and stocks are not plentiful. Business is almost wholly by professional traders. But there is more confidence in the outlook it would seem. Early business was on a fair scale. Afterwards it slackened.

By afternoon in New York Missouri Pacific, which had risen 1¼ most a point, was unchanged and Reading, which had risen ¼, lower. Southern Pacific ¼, Reading ¼, Lehigh Valley ¼, New Haven ¼, Erie ¼, Delaware & Hudson ¼, Ashland ¼, American Smelting ¾, Northern Pacific ¼ and Union Pacific ¼. American Can was off ⅛ and Steel ¼, while Baltimore & Ohio had declined ¼ and Studebaker ⅛.

In Boston New Haven was up ⅛ and Boston & Maine ¼ lower. United Fruit had advanced 2¾ and among other gains were American Telephone ¾, Union Pacific ½, Calumet & Arizona ¼, Granby 1, North Butte ½ and Mohawk ½. Osceola had declined ¾ on a small transaction. Shoe common was a point lower.

TONE GREW FIRMER.

As had been the case in London, stocks were irregular at the opening in New York, but grew firmer and within a few minutes most issues were showing gains. Early trading was heavier than on than before this week, first hour transactions totalling nearly 110,000 shares. Around the opening there was no notes amounting to $25,000,000, which matures in June. Apparently confidence in this issue is due to a rumor that the road will pass under Rockefeller control.

There was more demand for coppers than has been observed of late. The warrants market in London was strong and leading sellers there were asking from 14.85 to 14.70 cents a pound for electrolytic March shipments of the metal from this country broke records and amounted to 45,873 tons, an increase of 4,271 compared with the figure for the previous month of 1912. It is said that domestic purchases are improving in volume and that consumers are buying for more distant dates, indicating they do not expect price cutting by producers. The foreign visible supply decreased more than 600 tons during the first week of March.

STEEL RATHER HEAVY.

Steel was an issue which continued rather heavy, the understanding being that orders are coming in at a reduction on a smaller scale. It the steel industry is not on a par with a borrowed as some claim, immediate business prospects are not wholly encouraging. Neither insurance men or bankers are predicting any increase in buying this month, while the Iron Age says: "The result of 'wait of time' trade is not seen in the growing belief that more business is coming, but rather in a need to give steel mills work enough to run full."

RAILROAD EARNINGS.

Railroads were little affected by poor earnings, and during the first few minutes New York Central advanced a trifle, although it reports for February a decrease of about 15 per cent in gross and nearly 76 in net. President Smith of that road talked pleasantly to analysts yesterday concerning the railroad outlook. During the morning Union Pacific was the centre of attention, advancing almost a point. The advance was attributed to a court refusal to enjoin the road from making the proposed distribution to common stockholders in connection with dissolution of the merger of Harriman lines. Bulls were disappointed over the gain by this speculative leader did not have more effect upon the list in general. Union Pacific was scarce, and its rise was based on a few transactions. Bulls said the advance of stocks was unpronounced and general that a favorable rate decision by the Interstate Commerce Commission would surely cause a big uplift. Bears maintained that if an increase is granted it would have little effect. According to their theory a rate increase is already discounted. Nothing else, from their viewpoint, accounts for gains for several days.

BALTIMORE & OHIO WEAK.

Baltimore & Ohio was a weak rail during the morning, declining nearly two points to 85¾. By midday it had recovered little of this loss. The majority of active issues in both Boston and New York were then higher than at the close, showing a good gain. The demand for it was much in excess of offerings, however, and prices were narrow in all markets.

Among strong coppers in Boston were Calumet & Arizona, Granby and Utah Copper. Of the industrials Steel was superior. By noon United Fruit was up 1¾, and American Woolen preferred had advanced a point. The local market as a whole had a firm tone at the start. It is reported that arbitrage brokers did considerable business here during the forenoon.

FEDERAL RESERVE CAPITAL.

It is stated at Washington that the federal reserve system will start business with authorized capital totalling about $100,000,000, the estimate being based upon figures in the reports of the 7,496 national banks in response to the call for statements as to condition on March 4 last. These banks report to the comptroller of currency capital and surplus aggregating approximately $1,788,000,000. The new banking and currency law requires that each bank in the reserve system must subscribe as capital for the latter 6 per cent. of its capital and surplus. This would insure a reserve system capital of about $100,000,000, as 7,465 of the banks reporting on March 4 are to become members of the system.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

The London copper warrants market was firm this morning and by noon spot was up 7s. 6d. and futures 15s.

The Bank of England's minimum rate of discount remained unchanged at 3 per cent. today. In some quarters a reduction had been expected. For the week its proportion of reserve to liabilities was 41.69 per cent., compared with 41.35 for the corresponding week last year.

Pittsburgh Coke output production in March exceeded that of February by 1,049,528 pounds.

R. H. Johnstone, the former publicity man of the White Company and at present the manager of the New York branch, has been elevated to the position of president of the Automobile Trade Association of New York State. This position entails a great amount of work and carries with it no end of responsibility. To be selected to fill this position is a tribute well worth having.

The Milwaukee (Wis.) Motorcycle Club has decided on May 16, as the date for the start of their annual Goodfellowship tour. This event is not an endurance or speed test in any sense, but is purely a pleasure trip. Last year 121 riders took part in this three-day tour, many of them being women, and it is expected that even a greater number will participate in this year's run.

Since the war in Mexico, the railway service in that country has been so badly mutilated that it has been almost impossible for traveling salesmen to cover their routes. One salesman, however, Harry A. Kahn of El Paso, has successfully solved the problem by purchasing a motorcycle on which he makes his territory. And so well pleased is Mr. Kahn with the service given by the two-wheeler that he declares that even when the war is over and the railroads are back in condition he will continue to make his trip awheel.

To the Senate: Remember the Fate of Cleveland and Taft, and Be Wise

The transcontinental railroads, aided by the British Foreign Office and the President of the United States, have won the first battle in their war upon the Panama Canal as a regulator of railroad rates.

By a majority of eighty-six the House of Representatives has alienated—so far as its power goes—the only usefulness the Panama Canal possessed as a check upon the extortions of the transcontinental roads, and as a factor in the upbuilding of the United States merchant marine.

These two precious national assets have been surrendered rather than offend a President with postoffices and collectorships to distribute; rather than deny an unreasonable request of the British government during the continuance of the Mexican and Japanese complications with which the President confesses himself incompetent to cope.

The action of the House Democrats is, of course, in flat defiance of their party's platform pledge, but, they argue, what is a platform pledge compared to a promised postoffice?

Moreover, how can the Representative in Congress be expected to take a higher view of his platform obligations than the President for whose especial guidance the platform was made, and who singled out the plank, now repudiated, for especial eulogy while appealing to the country for votes?

The one thing which differentiates the Congressman's position from the President's is that the former must seek re-election in a few months. He will then learn just how much the railroad and pro-British forces he served so well with his vote will serve him with the people.

Laughable, if it were not contemptible, would be the form of the appeal made by several of the spokesmen of the administration. They seemed to think that defeat of the repeal measure would mean the defeat of Mr. Wilson for renomination, and they wasted much time and oratory in assuring their hearers that only with Wilson could the Democracy hope for a continuation of its control of the government.

As a matter of fact, victory in this fight will be the first, and fatal step, in the Democratic progress toward another quarter of a century of exile.

Mr. Wilson writes history, but is singularly blind to its teachings—being, like other school teachers, more inclined to instruct others than to accept instruction himself.

But he ought to know something about recent political history—particularly about certain incidents which redounded to his own benefit.

Every one conversant with political affairs knows that President Taft forced his project for reciprocity with Canada upon an unwilling and a rebellious Congress. The measure itself was admirable, possessing more of the qualities of constructive statesmanship than anything President Wilson has fathered in his year of power. But, excellent as the reciprocity law was, its passage was obtained by something of the methods which we have seen employed to secure the passage of the repeal bill—though President Taft lacked something of the coarseness of the Wilson methods.

The result is history. Congress grumbled, rebelled and submitted. But the Congressmen proved wiser judges of the temper of their constituents than the President. Hardly had they done his bidding than they began to square themselves with their home people. Many of them flatly opposed his renomination. Others, accepting that as inevitable, labored to secure their own re-election regardless of the head of the ticket. Mr. Taft discovered in November that while he could boss Congress he could not boss the country.

If that was the result of Presidential dictation in a good cause, what will be the outcome of the Wilson enforcement of a policy for which the strongest arguments take only the form of apologies?

We may go further back. We may cite the history of the party whose platform Mr. Wilson took only to destroy.

Even a gentleman so forgetful of his own contributions to history as President Wilson can hardly have forgotten the way in which President Cleveland forced upon Congress the repeal of the Sherman silver purchase law.

In that fight all the vocabulary of this one was employed, if not, indeed, invented. "Maintain the national honor," "defer to world-wide custom," "imitate the example of Great Britain," were phrases as current then as in the mouthings of the administration's spokesmen today.

Congress was reluctant then as now, but President Cleveland was as domineering as President Wilson, and quite as astute and unashamed in his use of patronage. Singular, by the way, how cleverly the noisiest civil service reformers are in using the offices to further their own ends!

Cleveland won. Congress yielded grudgingly. The Democratic party lost the House at the next election. Cleveland lost his party in the following Presidential election, and the party lost the country. The chief profit fell to an unknown Congressman from Nebraska who fought the President in the House, and whom President Wilson later vainly sought to have knocked "into a cocked hat."

Whatever may be thought of Bryan's merits as a Secretary of State, he is hardly the man to urge upon Congressmen the duty and the personal expediency of "standing by the President."

We offer for Democratic contemplation these two comparatively recent examples of the political effect of Presidential dictation to Congress. In the one case Cleveland bullied his party out of power for a quarter-century. In the other Taft lashed his unwilling followers into a like dismal defeat. The merits of the measures involved did not count with the voters. It was the personal dictation, the official arrogance that rankled and was resented at the polls.

The Senate has its chance to save the Democratic party from Wilson, to read clearly the lesson of history and avert the approach of such a disaster as Cleveland worked in 1892. What will it do?

THE WASHINGTON WARBLERS!

The next number will be a grand walk-around by the whole company. Now all join in the chorus:

"Come all ye haughty foreigners, and listen to our lay!
We'll drop our independence and do anything you say!
We'll try to please the Britishers, the Greasers and the Japs,
And folks will say, 'My word, you know! What dear, delightful chaps!' "

The People or the Railroads

BY ALFRED HENRY LEWIS (Reprinted from Hearst's Magazine)

Remembering what you've read, remembering what the S. P. did, remembering what other railroads were doing, and are doing, was it too much to say that "you must either own the railroads or the railroads will own you?"

The hard-working Mr. Huntington proudly registers a triumph over the hated Mr. Scott.

> "I notice you are looking after the State Railroad Commissioners; I think it in time. Congress had adjourned and we have not been hurt, except by the paying out of some money. . . .
> I stayed in Washington two days to fix up (Pacific) R. R. Committee in the Senate. . . . The committee is just as we want it.

Time goes on and the year is 1878. As early as January 22 of that year, Mr. Huntington is troubled by a New York paper. Says he:

> The World again published today that the C. P. and S. P. owe 14 millions floating debt, and it hurts us very much. . . . A few months ago, I could have had it in our interest, by paying its losses, or in other words, paying the bills that they, the World, could not pay, which would be from $2,000 to $5,000 a month. I did not think it worth while. . . . Matters do not look well in Washington, but I think we shall not be much hurt, although the boys are very hungry, and it will cost considerably to be saved. The Sub. Com. of the (Pacific) R. R. Com. of the House have agreed to report Scott's T. and P. bills. . . . It can be stopped, but I doubt if it would be worth the cost. . . . The T. and P. folks (Scott) are working hard. They offered one M. C. one thousand dollars cash down, five thousand dollars when the bill passed, and ten thousand of the bonds when they get them, if he would vote for the bill.

In these excerpts from the Huntington-Colton letters, which record how White Horses were tickled and Congresses bribed, we have been able to gather some impression of the S. P.'s attitude toward the people as a whole. There is a short chapter which might be written by way of showing the picture of its attitude toward individuals.

Through a region known as the Mussel Slough, the S. P. built what is called its Goshen branch. This branch route had not been indicated in its articles of incorporation and under both State and Federal rulings the S. P. had no right to lay this track. It made its grades and spiked down its rails, none the less, and—as usual—claimed every other section of land, for several miles either way from its tracks, as a gift to it from the government. Men, with their families, entered upon these stolen lands, reared houses, fenced fields, plowed and planted. Collectively, they were known as the Mussel Slough settlers.

There came news—May, 1880—to San Francisco of seven men killed on the Mussel Slough lands. Concerning the bloody business, this story, told without emotion and with a painful lack of detail, appeared in the Call of May 12:

> Visalia, May 11.—United States Marshal Poole and W. H. Clark, the land-grader, arrived at Hanford this morning to dispossess the settlers, and left Hanford at half-past seven to serve process on William Breden and others. The Leaguers collected and followed the marshal, and overtook him three miles north of Grangeville, and commanded him and the grader to surrender, which they did. Then they commanded Crow, a purchaser from the Railroad Company, and a companion named Harte to surrender. Instead of surrendering, they leaped upon a spring wagon and fired with a shotgun and rifle, killing James Harris, Iver Knudson, and John Henderson, and wounding Archie McGregor, William Breden, D. Kelley, and a man named Haymaker, all being settlers. The settlers returned the fire, wounding Harte fatally, and the Crow retreated at some distance, a shot struck him, killing him instantly. There is great excitement at Hanford and vicinity, but the leaders of the League caution prudence.

The Call omitted to mention that Marshal Poole and Grader Clark, after the killing, were safely guarded by the "Leaguers" until they could be put aboard a train and sent back to Sacramento. Also, not three but five of the settlers were killed by Harte and Crow before these hired thugs of the S. P. could be shot down.

As explaining its interest in the slaughter, the S. P. printed the following lies in the San Francisco papers:

> The Southern Pacific Railroad Company authorities furnish the following version of the Mussel Slough District affair: The Act of Congress under which the Company holds title was passed in July, 1865, and took effect on the filing by the company of a map of its route January 3, 1871. The act carefully reserved all rights of settlers which had accrued prior to January 3, 1871, and the uniform ruling of the Interior Department has been favorable to those who had any show of right attaching on or before that date, and in no case has the Land Department failed to recognize the equities of those in possession at the time the railroad grant became operative. Late in 1876, or early in 1877, the company asked for the issuance of patents for the lands in Mussel Slough District. In conformity with that request, they were issued in 1877, for those pieces on which there was no contest. The company then notified the settlers of the price, terms, etc., on which they were ready to dispose of the land, but the settlers refused either to buy, rent or vacate the lands. In October, 1878, Mr. D. Harris, W. J. Crow and others made application to purchase certain pieces of land, made part payments and received contracts for deeds. On showing their papers to the settlers and asking possession, their request was denied. In 1878, suits were commenced, and last December judgments were rendered in favor of the railroad company. The settlers still refused to vacate. In the meantime Harte repeatedly, by letter, importuned President Stanford and the directors of the company to put him in possession. The company finally decided that further delay or attempts at compromise would be productive of no good effect, and got out writs, which were given to United States Marshal Poole for service, with the result indicated in the dispatches received from the scene of action. The railroad authorities claim that in all cases they have given the settlers the first chance to purchase, and only on their declining have given others an opportunity to buy. They further claim that the rates they have fixed on their lands are in almost every case materially lower than those demanded by the settlers for similar lands.

Both in equity and in law, the S. P. was without shadow of title to these Mussel Slough lands. The Interior Department Secretaries, the Attorney-General, and the courts of California had said so in the following order: Secretary Cox, November 2, 1869; Secretary Delano, May 9, 1873; Attorney-General Devens, July 16, 1878; Commissioner Drummond, January 23, 1874; Secretary Schurz, August 2, 1878; Supreme Court of California, August 1880.

Mr. Huntington in Washington, through the accommodating Senator Howard as chairman of the Pacific Railroad Committee of the Senate, undertook to defeat these decisions of the courts and the departments and confirm in the S. P. a title to these stolen lands. You will recall occasional allusions to the business in Mr. Huntington's letters to Mr. Colton, and one in particular where he says: "I think I've got our land matters fixed."

The Little "King of Rome"

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

If ever a child was wanted it was the little "King of Rome," who came to the great Napoleon and his empress wife one hundred and three years ago.

And yet there is no sadder story in all history than the one dealing with that same royal babe. Hard must be the human heart that does not soften at the story of the little prince, whose cup was to be so full of disappointment and sorrow, and who was to die soon after reaching his majority without ever having been within a million miles of a crown that was his own.

Probably Napoleon was the happiest man in the world when the tidings was brought to him that a man-child had been born unto him. The great Emperor was at the height of his power. Sixty millions of people owned him as their earthly lord and master. His name was the most illustrious to be found among mankind now, in the one that had come to him, he saw the continuation of his dynasty and the perpetuation of his glory.

But ah, me! upon what slender, brittle threads hang the proudest ambition of mortal man. Almost immediately after the birth of the much wanted son there came the invasion of Russia with its limit of woes for France and her Emperor; the glorious, but ineffectual, campaign of Leipsic; the first Abdication; Elba; the Hundred Days; Waterloo and the lonely rock in the distant seas—and the Man of Destiny was down and out for good and all.

And the poor little "King of Rome" was of no more consequence than a boot-black or chimney-sweep. His crown went up in vapor around Montmartre and Mont St. Jean, and he was no longer of so great importance than the peasant's son.

The little fellow was made Duke of Reichstadt by his royal grandfather, and around the Austrian house the juvenile King without a kingdom led a very easy time until he was rudely relieved of the mischievous by diphtheria, a few weeks ago, he had reached his twenty-first year.

There are those who firmly believe that the world rests not on Gravitation, but on the Moral Law, and these feel that, carried to excess, the life of the King of Rome was, it was born to bottom, in strict keeping with the Old Eternal law of Right. Napoleon loved Josephine, and did not care a fig for the Austrian woman; and yet he cast aside the woman he loved in order that he might have a son by the woman he did not love—a son who should inherit his blood-stained glory. But the combination did not work, and the son and the glory went down together.

A Woman's Thoughts About Woman—The Great Consolation of an Imagination in Marriage. Why Widows Wear Veils—The Pity of Loving a Dog!

By DOROTHY DIX

SYMPATHETIC women are the world's pincushions.

It is strange that the woman who prides herself on always speaking the truth so seldom tells anything but an unpleasant truth.

For a woman to be without some one to hate makes her almost as lonesome as to be without some one to love.

Women achieve more to spite their enemies than they do to gratify their friends.

There are so many women in the world who are pure gold—with a dull finish.

Some widows wear veils to hide their grief. Other widows cover their faces with veils to conceal their joy.

The test of a woman's cleverness consists in never letting her husband find out how clever she is.

Our husbands respect us for our virtues and admire us for our strength of character, but they never love us as well as when we are making three-ply idiots of ourselves.

Men judge women as a whole. Women judge men by an individual, and both standards of measurement are wrong.

When God made woman he gave her imagination as a consolation prize, so that she would never have to see her husband and children as they really are.

A woman's definition of a true friend is another woman who will stand for the stories about her children's smart sayings, without retaliating by repeating what her infant prodigies do and say.

Many a neglected wife of a rich man tries to smother the ache in her breast by piling point lace and diamonds on it.

The only happy women are those who have genius for little things and an insatiable thirst for small beer tattle.

Some of the choicest jewels in many a wife's collection were bought by her husband for her with conscience money.

In the strange scheme of justice it is the bad women who avenge the wrongs of the good women.

Only fools laugh at a woman lavishing her affection on a dog. The discerning weep at the spectacle of a heart so poor that it has nothing but a dumb brute to love.
